Du Pont Went Shopping
Where Were the Nordics
Ten Young Frenchmen
The Sacred White Obi

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1927, by Star Company

MR. DU PONT, of Du Pont de Nemours Company, went shopping and casually reports that he bought for his company fourteen million dollars' worth of "big steel" stock. Du Pont de Nemours is the biggest owner of General Motors stock, and this Du Pont shopping tour has aroused great Wall Street excitement and speculation.

Some guess that a super-trust is to be based on a combination of General Motors and United States Steel, which would earn about four hundred million dollars net profits a year. That would be five per cent. on eight billions, and big business would be on its way to a record worth while.

Yesterday, United States Steel, just because Du Pont had been buying it, jumped to a new high price of $134.50. Considering that every holder of one hundred shares recently got forty shares of stock free, you will see that if you buy the right stuff in the United States and keep it, it will keep you, and you won't have to worry about anything, except your health.

The "Goodwood Cup" race, climax of England's fashionable season, was won yesterday by Dark Japan, owned by the Aga Khan. That gentleman receives a huge income from faithful Mohammedans and spends some of it on racing.

Royal Pom was second, owned by Sir Abe Bailey; and Glommen was third, owned by Sol Joel. Where were the proud Nordics? They also ran.

Ten earnest students, selected from leading French universities, arrived yesterday to study in America. They will really STUDY. Americans not familiar with earnest young Frenchmen have no conception of their seriousness and mental power.

Lord Bryce said to Ostrogorsky, the eminent Russian writer: "Learned men in France send to England young Frenchmen of most admirable intellectual earnestness, bringing letters of introductions to me, and I am obliged to admit with regret that we cannot send from England to France young men with that same earnestness."

Instead of studying in the United States, the ten young Frenchmen might teach us "how to study" if they had the time.

Dies After He Takes Canoe

Buzzards Bay, July 29 (A.P.)—Willard Perry, No. 3 Stearn street, Cambridge, was drowned when a canoe he had taken without permission tipped over as he was paddling from Gray Gables shore to Bay State dredge No. 7, anchored in the Cape Cod Canal entrance channel off Hog Island.

A fellow employe on the dredge, who refused to accompany Perry, saw the canoe capsize about halfway to its destination.

Perry, he said, went down without a cry and did not reappear.

Detroit, July 29 (I.N.S.).—Governor Albert C. Ritchie, State's rights champion and a potential Democratic candidate for the presidency, declared here today that "Wheelerism," as it is exemplified by Wayne B. Wheeler, generalissimo of the Anti-Saloon League, "is coming to be a real menace to the country."

The Governor expressed his opinion of Wheeler in a remarkable letter to the University of Michigan, in which he declined an invitaton to debate the prohibition issue with Wheeler at the university open forum. The letter was written a week ago and only became public here today when newspapermen

BOTH PRISONERS NEAR COLLAPSE FROM FOOD STRIKE, SAY OFFICIALS

The death house and the electric chair at State Prison were made ready today to receive Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti while defense counsel made final pleas to Governor Fuller.

Bedding was placed in the death house cells and prison workmen started oiling the straps of the death chair and otherwise putting the equipment for electrocution in shape.

All visitors of the sight-seeing type were barred from the entire prison as is always done as the date of an execution nears.

Sacco and Vanzetti are both nearing collapse as a result of their hunger strike, according to prison officials.

One of Warden Hendry's chief assistants was in conference today with both Dr. Joseph R. McLaughlin, State Prison physician, and Governor Fuller. At the request of Dr. McLaughlin, Mrs. Rose Sacco begged her husband and Vanzetti to halt their hunger strike before the

BLAME 28 LAKE DEATHS ON 'ROTTED LIFEBELTS'

Chicago, July 29.—The twenty-eight victims in the sinking of the excursion boat Favorite, which foundered off Lincoln Park in Lake Michigan here yesterday, were trapped like rats with no chance of saving their lives, it was indicated today by Coroner Oscar Wolff.

"Every one of the life belts on the boat bore government inspection stamps of approval dating back more than seventeen years," Wolff declared. "The ropes binding the corks together were rotten and fell apart. The buoyancy of the belts was incapable of supporting a human body."

Investigators learned, too, that the frail craft normally had a capacity of ten persons and a crew of three. But a special excursion permit, is thorities have to resort to forcible feeding to keep them alive.

WIFE PLEADS WITH SACCO TO ABANDON HIS HUNGER STRIKE

OFFICIALS WARN OF DEATH

Their condition is serious and they cannot live much longer without nourishment, Mrs. Sacco was told by the doctor.

Meeting Mrs. Sacco as she arrived at the prison with Gardner Jackson of the defense committee, Dr. McLaughlin drew her aside and implored her to do everything in her power to persuade the prisoners to eat.

After a long and earnest conversation, in which seh inquired about methods of forced feeding in such emergencies, she used her powers of entreaty on both Sacco and Vanzetti, whom she met separately in the prison barber shop, the customary meeting place. A guard was present as usual.

Mrs. Sacco is ordinarily stoical because, as she has been accustomed to say to friends, she had "no tears left after seven years of waiting and fighting and false hope." But today she showed signs of strain for the first time in months and her visit to the prison was hours earlier than usual.

While she was on her way, the final pleas of the defense to Governor Fuller, for the lives of the condemned men, were made by Attorneys William G. Thompson and Herbert Ehrmann.

Atty. Thompson also presented the Governor a statement in Vanzetti's handwriting. The nature of this was not disclosed, but it was understood to be the completion of Vanzetti's argument, begun during his interview with the Governor at State Prison last Tuesday night.

Sacco was today on the thirteenth day of his self-imposed fast. Vanzetti began his fast at the same time as Sacco, on Sunday, July 17, but prison authorities declare he ate one meal last Sunday. This, Mrs. Sacco denied in her conversation today, with Dr. McLaughlin.

While she and Jackson went to the prison with the express purpose of questioning Dr. McLaughlin, they found him just as eager to see them, or rather to see Mrs. Sacco, for he insisted on talking to her alone.

A considerable part of their conversation was overheard by Jackson and newspapermen and she later related to her escort what the doctor had told her. Dr. McLaughlin and other officials have been reluctant to make public statements about the condition of the hunger strikers and most of the information in this respect has come through Mrs. Sacco and other visitors.

In the facts given Mrs. Sacco today, they made the first admission that Sacco and Vanzetti are nearing the end, if they persist in fasting.

Mrs. Sacco, because of the signs of weakness in her husband, did not take her little daughter, Ines, to the prison with her today. Her worst fears were confirmed when she learned that both Sacco and Vanzetti were extremely weak this morning when examined by the physician.

TO ESCAPE EXECUTION.

There is no doubt in the minds of officials that Sacco and Vanzetti have intended to continue their hunger strike until after Governor Fuller makes his decision. This decision is expected next Monday.

In event of a pardon, they would eat. If doomed to die, they would choose to die by starvation and exhaustion.

Wha ttheir attitude would be in case of a commutation to life imprisonment, even their friends and sympathizers would not guess, but it was thought possible, by some, that they would break their fast and hope for freedom by means of a parole.

"Our visit today was for the purpose of getting accurate and full information from the prison physician," said Jackson, while Mrs. Sacco was with her husband. "I am certain that something must be done. They are very weak and suffering acutely.

"A lot of new information has come to us recently about other phases of the case. We have learned that one of the prison officials is firm in his belief that Vanzetti is innocent, and probably Sacco, too.

"Vanzetti, in talking at length with this official, showed that he knew nothing about revolvers. For example, he could not understand how a bullet could be found in a murdered man and the cartridge case found elsewhere.

"Guards noticed that Vanzetti did not smoke. The fact is that he never smoked, although witnesses at the trial told of seeing him smoking. As for driving an automobile, as one witness described him, he doesn't know a thing about autos."

Mrs. Sacco was met by Mrs. Katherine B. Codman, wealthy sympathizer, as she was leaving the prison and rode away in her automobile.

The final conference and hearing before Governor Fuller at the State House today were behind closed doors.

The hearing began early, for the Governor arrived at the State House ahead of his aides and while scrubwomen were still at work. He seemed very grave.

Attorney Thompson, accompanied by Atty. Herbert Ehrmann, assistant defense counsel, arrived ten minutes later and there was a short secret conference between Governor Fuller and Thompson.

The arguments, which lasted for several hours, began shortly afterward, with Atty. Ehrmann, Atty. Joseph Wiggin, the Governor's personal counsel, and three male stenographers the only ones present besides Governor Fuller and Atty. Thompson.

At the finish of the hearing Governor Fuller planned to interview one or two more witnesses.

An appeal to a judge of the United State Supreme Court, in the event that Governor Fuller declines to intervene, loomed today as a possibility but nothing will be done in this respect, according to the defense committee, until the Governor's decision is made.

ALIBI WITNESSES' PLEA.

With Thompson speaking about nine-tenths of the time the two defence lawyers argued four hours before luncheon and returned to renew their efforts after taking only half an hour to eat and refresh themselves. Thompson refused to make any prediction as to the outcome.

Sacco-Vanzetti defence alibi witnesses today handed Governor Fuller a petition in which they demanded to be arrested as perjurers if he decides the two prisoners are guilty.

The petition was taken to the State House by Beltrando Brini, law student who, as a boy of thirteen, was befriended and encouraged to study by Vanzetti.

Those who signed it were R. Albert Bosco, A. Dentemaro, Ph. D., Felice Guadagni, Enrico Bostoni, Mary Fortini, Carlo Balboni, Giovanni DeCarti, Augusta Nicholi, Melvin L. Cori, Vincent L. Longhi, Augusta Malaguti, Faye Wager, Alfonsina Brini and Beltrando Brini. The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, alibi witnesses for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, respectfully call Your Excellency's attention to the effect of your decision upon us.

"If you do not set Sacco and Vanzetti free you thereby accuse us of perjury. As perjurers we are subject to punishment under the laws of this Commonwealth.

"We ask you in the interests of truth and justice to arrest us and bring us to trial, charged with perjury, if you decide against Sacco and Vanzetti."

Governor Fuller today received a telegram from the widow of Alessandro Berardelli, one of the two men slain in the South Braintree holdup. She asked freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti, declaring she had always entertained doubt of their guilt.

Investigation of the Sacco Case Costs State $5,000

It was estimated today that the investigation of the Sacco-Vanzetti case by the Governor and the special advisory board will cost the Commonwealth approximately $5,000.

A large part of this sum went toward paying transportation and loss of pay to witnesses.

Two Boston Boys Win American Trophies

At four Citizens' Military Training Camps in New England this afternoon large silver cups—the Boston Evening American trophy—were presented to four youths, two of them from Boston.

The cups were awarded in each of the four camps to the youth "who, by his demeanor in camp, the response to authority and ability to command, indicated that he possessed the highest qualities of citizenship."

These are the camps and winners:

Camp Devens—Henry O. Kelley, 18, of No. 17 Hartland street, Dorchester, Boston University student, sergeant 301st Infantry, Organized Reserves.

Fort Ethan Allan, Burlington, Vt. —Thomas Wilson Dunn, 19, of No. 221 Metropolitan avenue, Roslindale, attached to BX Cavalry Troop.

Fort McKinley, Portland, Me.—Franklin F. Ferguson, 19, of No. 9 Deering street, Portland, attached to Company K, Infantry.

Fort Adams, Newport, R. I.—Russell T. Sharpe, 21, of No. 60 Division street, East Greenwich, R. I., Coast Artillery course.

The awards were made at the respective camps by the following boards of army officers:

Camp Devens—Colonel William K. Naylor, commanding officer; Lieutenant-Colonel O. A. Pritchard, adjutant-general, O. R. C.; Major J. A. Stevens, 13th U. S. Infantry, and Captain A. D. Johnson, 13th U. S. Infantry.

Fort Ethan Allen—Major Ralph Talbot, Jr., 7th Field Artillery, U. S. A.; Major John F. Stevens, 3rd Cavalry, U. S. A.; Captain Gordon J. F. Heron, Cavalry, D. O. L.

Fort McKinley—Majors Martyn H. Shute, Lewis E. Goddier, Jr., retired, and Geoffrey P. Baldwin, 5th Infantry.

Fort Adams—Majors Hugo E. Pitz, Sydney S. Winslow and Adam E. Potts, all of the Coast Artillery.

The awards were made today at final reviews held at each camp.

Kelley, the winner at Camp Devens, was selected from 1,054 young men in training and, commenting upon the award, the judges said they agreed he was the outstanding student soldier in his ability to command.

Kelley does not come from a military family. His father is a house painter. The winner of the Boston Evening American trophy became interested in military affairs while attending Boston English High School. He was a captain of the English High Cadets.

He has already won several honors because of his ability in things military, having won a medal as the most efficient R. O. T. C. student in the freshman class at Boston University and medals as a rifle marksman and pistol shot, first class, at the C. M. T. C.

Young Kelley is one of the most modest young men who attended the C. M. T. C. here this season.

Upon recommendation of the company commander, Kelley jumped from first to third year work here. Although rated as a fourth-year student he has attended the C. M. T. C. only three seasons.

"I advise every young man who can do so to attend one of the Citizens' Military Training Camps," said the winner of the Boston Evening American trophy. "It will do every boy who attends much good.

Says Sacco, Vanzetti Are Misunderstood

When Attorney Thompson returned after luncheon he told reporters that he hoped to finish arguing this evening, but did not know whether he could. He said Governor Fuller was asking many questions.

His forenoon argument, Thompson explained, was devoted almost entirely to the alleged innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti, together with some attention to the claim that the trial was unfair.

"Sacco and Vanetti are in a pitiful condition over at the prison," he said. "Europeans—these men are Europeans—that explains a lot of things about this case. It is simply impossible for Americans to understand these two men without an understanding of their European turn of mind.

"Offhand I can think of only one analogy. Assume that President Lowell of Harvard was arrested and tried in Russia for some crime. How could the Russians possibly get his point of view. He would immediately be denounced as president of a capitalist college, a friend of capital, an enemy of the working class, and before his trial had progressed far bullets would be flying back of the courthouse."

Atty. Thompson refused to comment on the matter of making an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, if Governor Fuller's decision is unfavorable. Members of the defense committee said no definite plans had been made.

Buenos Aires, July 29 (A.P.)—Preparations are being made by the Federation of Regional Workers of Argentina, the strongest labor organization in the country, for a meeting Sunday to protest against the sentencing to death of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti by the Massachusetts Court.

Next day there will be another demonstration of sympathy for the condemned men.

AKELY'S FIRST WIFE CUT OFF IN HIS WILL

New York July 29 (A.P.).—Carl E. Akely, big game hunter and explorer, left his entire estate of "under $10,000" to his widow, Mary L. Jobe Akely, herself a noted explorer, filing of his will for probate today revealed. Nothing was left the scientist's first wife, Mrs. Delia Akely, also an explorer and big game hunter, from whom he was divorced. Three brothers were not mentioned in the willl.

The will, in Akley's handwriting on letterhead of the American Museum of Natural History, was executed in 1921 before he had married for the second time. The clause cutting off his first wife reads as follows:

"This will is made with full purpose and intent that none of my estate shall be taken or received by my wife, Delia Akely, who deserted me in 1918, after having received as a settlement and provision for the future all the property I then possessed."

The will named Martha Miller of Summerset, N. J., as sole legatee in case hes houlds urvive his second wife.

LAST CALL TO PAY TAXES ON BOSTON REAL ESTATE

City Collector George H. Johnson today issued a last call for payment of this year's real estate taxes, prior to the annual auction sale August 20 of the city's liens on all unpaid taxes.

He said only 1,500 parcels of land would be advertised for unpaid taxes, as against 9,000 last year. The city collector reports a saving to taxpayers of $25,000 in the cost of preparation and printing and overtime for clerks. The cost this year was $5,000 as compared to $32,000 last year.

Lynn Bars Transparent Suits on Beach

A letter ordering Police Chief Thomas M. Burckes to station officers along Lynn streets leading to the beaches and arrest girls wearing immodest bathing suits was sent to the chief by Mayor Bauer of Lynn today.

The Mayor said in his letter he spent yesterday at Lynn Beach and observed "hundreds of girls parading the beach and roads in suits that were as transparent as fly netting."

"The mothers are to blame if, in a few years, the girls wake up and find themselves on the human scrap heap," said the Mayor.

"I witnessed the most immodest review at Lynn Beach that I have ever seen before, or ever could imagine. It was the rawest appearing procession I have ever seen on the public streets and the Metropolitan Park commissioners are certainly derelict in their duty in permitting such immodesty at the beach."

Kittery Point, Me., July 29 (A.P.).—Thirteen-year-old Mary Steele of Watertown, Mass., jumped from a trestle thirteen feet above the waters of Locke's Cove and rescued Wilson Ford, ten, of this town, who had fallen from a boat. Then she swam out again to the boat and rowed it to shore with another boy, who had been with the Ford lad and who was unable to row.

The girl, who is visiting Mrs. A. S. Lamond, a relative, was walking with two other girls across the trestle when she saw the boy go over the side of the boat.

LAY BURGLARY TO PATROLMAN HELD IN BAIL

Patrolman Joseph D. Parker of West Roxbury station, sentenced to three months on a larceny charge in Littleton, was held for the Grand Jury today in West Roxbury District Court on charges of breaking into a men's furnishing store on his beat and of receiving stolen goods.

His own captain, James V. Smith, asked that he be held on substantial bail and $5,000 was named on the break charge and $2,00 on that of receiving stolen goods.

Parker was arrested today at his home in Elgin street, West Roxbury, on two warrants by Sergeant Alfred Daniels. The arrest came after the finding in Parker's house of property alleged to have been stolen from the store in Centre street in May, which Parker reported as having been robbed. In the lot were a Panama hat, arm bands, hosiery, ties and other furnishings.

Early this week Parker was arrested on a charge of larceny from a Littleton farmer. Property including a pair of trousers, was found in Parker's house. He was taken to Ayer, where, despite his plea of not guilty, he was sentenced to three months. He appealed.

He had been suspended by Captain Smith.

sued during the Summer months, authorized it to carry 158 passengers and a crew of ten.

Four bodies, Federal, State, county and city are probing the tragedy.

While these investigations into the horror, in which two Boston men played hero roles, are under way, four members of the boat's crew are under arrest. One of those held is the captain of the ship.

Ten persons are still believed to be missing. Two bodies were recovered by divers today. These divers are still at work combing the waters in the vicinity of the disaster.

The disaster occurred during a sudden offshore squall that passed in a few seconds, leaving the lake as smooth as a mill pond.

The tragedy came almost twelve years to a day from the date of Chicago's greatest water disaster, the sinking of the steamer Eastland with a loss of 812 lives. The two resulted from the same cause—the rush of passengers to the port side of the ship.

Sixteen of the victims in this new disaster were children—ten boys and six girls—ten were women and one was a man.

Some seventy-five women and children and half a dozen men were thrown into the water when the vessel toppled over, but forty or more were saved, some in a thrilling rescue by William Hofnauer, millionaire yachtsman, who chanced to be cruising by in his large yacht when the storm broke.

While divers today searched the lake bottom near the scene for more victims, derricks lifted the craft as flood lights were played on the tragic picture. The last six bodies were found as the ship came to the surface, eleven hours after the Favorite floundered.

As the vessel left Lincoln Park for the two mile run to the municipal pier, a two-piece negro orchestra—banjo and mandolin—strummed "I'm Looking for a Four-Leaf Clover," children scampered along decks and their elders hung over the rails admiring the Chicago skyline.

Suddenly, when a mile out, a rain storm broke and with it came a gust of wind out of the northwest. As the captain, Arthur Olson, who has sailed the lake 18 years, sought to head his boat into the wind, the passengers rushed to the portside, away from the driving rain. The boat dipped sharply and as the lake water rushed over the decks, turned over.

MANY HEROIC RESCUES.

Children, candies and popcorn still clutched in their hands, fought to free themselves, but the weight of chairs and other encumbrances on deck held them under. Some were thrown free of the boat and many of these grabbed up belts and rafts as the steamer righted itself and sank until all but the roof of the upper superstructure was submerged.

The five members of the crew escaped and these, all experienced sailors, saved many from drowning by quick action.

The Favorite's two lifeboats also were unleashed and into these clambered a number of the survivors.

Word of the tragedy sped along the lake front, a popular resort for swimmers, and small boats put out to the rescue.

The first to reach the scene was Mr. Hofnauer's yacht. Hofnauer and his companions saved a number of persons.

Today the triple inquiry into the accident was ordered.

One was an inquest, the others investigations by Michael Hughes chief of police, and State's Attorney Robert M. Crowe. Olson and his crew were arrested shortly after the tragedy.

Out of the sudden disaster came acts of heroism and devotion.

CAPTAIN HEARTBROKEN.

Olson, at the wheel of the boat, leaped through a cabin window into the water, turning back to drag several of his passengers from the boat.

Pulling himself along the sides of the boat he also cut away preservers, tossing them to persons floundering near the steamer. His daughter, Katherine, 9, also assisted several children to gain rafts or boats.

"Daddy did the best he could," said little Katherine.

"I was standing on the deck when the storm blew up. I looked up and saw daddy at the wheel. He stood there spinning the wheel and shouting orders to his men. He tried his best to see the boat righted, but when the crowd ran to one side they turned it over."

Katherine said she saved herself by swimming around until she came across one of the life belts that someone had thrown overboard.

Leo Sobata, an army officer, whose hand was mangled, told of throwing four children into a boat. Sobata related his experience as his hand was being dressed.

"I got four kids and a woman. The boat was full of water and we couldn't get any more in. A girl started bailing out with a straw hat. I was dizzy. When the Favorite went down she listed—" and he swooned.

Opal Helton, 18, of Hugo, Okla., visiting in Chicago, dragged two little girls through a window and held them afloat until a member of the crew pulled them into a life boat.

"It was terrible.. I wish I had gone down with the boat," Olson murmured as he watched his steamer being raised. At that instant a life guard reached into the first aft deck and dragged out a small boy.

"It's horrible—horrible, I tell you," the boat's master shouted. "I did the best I could—I tell you, man, it was terrible, and I had only recently spent a lot of money improving the Favorite."

JURISTS ATTEND LOWELL SERVICES FOR ENRIGHT

Lowell, July 29 (A.P.).—Public officials and other citizens from every walk of life filled the Immaculate Conception Church today for funeral services for Judge Thomas J. Enright, fifteen years senior presiding justice of Lowell District Court.

Jurists present included Judge George L. Battis of the appelate division, New York; Judge Frederick Stone of Cambridge, president of the District Judges' Association, and Judge McDonald of Marlboro. The officiating clrgyman was Rev. William J. Culburt of Westbrook, Me.

Survivors Tell Own Stories of Tragedy

Chicago, July 29 (A.P.).—Survivors of the Favorite tragedy still were overawed by the suddenness of the disastrous squall which struck the boat virtually without warning and gave the passengers no time for life-belts, the lifeboats or the emergency rafts.

Members of the crew also blamed the suddenness of the storm for the disaster on the grounds it gave them no time to direct a systematic disposal of the life preservers.

The story told by small Katherine Olson, daughter of the ill-fated ship's captain, was typical of the tragedy.

She said the weather had been ideal when the boat started its trip and had given no indication that the afternoon would be different from any of the 100 others she had spent with her daddy.

But suddenly the clouds gathered and the storm broke, waves dashing high against the side of the ship. Lightning flashed and rain fell as though poured from buckets, the child said, sending all the passengers scurrying to the opposite side of the boat to avoid the storm.

"The boat began to tip," she said, "and the scores of other children began to cry. I was afraid, too. I saw one big wave dash against the boat and fall back. Then came another, but this time it splashed over the deck and drenched us all.

"I don't remember the rest very well. There was a lot of terrible howling and I remember falling into the lake and felt the bottom with my feet. I came up and paddled and paddled, managing to keep up until somebody picked me up."

RESCUES HIS WIFE

Charles T. Abernathy, another survivor whose two children perished, said that when the storm broke he made his wife and the two boys stay on the upper deck.

"We were drenched but I thought it would be safer up there than down with the crowd below. As the boat began to list I cut some life belts from their fastenings but in that instant she toppled over and swept us all out in the lake.

"I managed to grab my wife, but the two boys were washed away. I fastened one of the belts around her and we kept afloat until they picked us up."

writes:

"The Russian lady—ah, how she delights in the puff of a fragrant cigarette! As a Russian I have tried them all—the cigarettes of Cairo, Paris, London, Madrid—but here in my adopted country, America, I have found my favorite cigarette 'The Lucky Strike.' In addition to its lovely fragrance and wonderful flavor it has no bad effect upon my voice—so even when I go abroad I carry with me my little trunk of Luckies—and enjoy a puff from America."

DOZEN SALOONS BURN IN $500,000 TIA JUANA FIRE

San Diego, Cal., July 29 (I.N.S.).—Tia Juana, picturesque resort across the international boundary, was visited by a devastating fire today when a block in the centre of the business section, including a dozen saloons, cafes and dance halls, burned with $500,000 loss.

The fire is believed to have been started by a cigarette thrown into a pile of debris behind the San Diego Cafe. It was controlled after three hours by American firemen from Chula Vista, Cal.

HUB MEN HELP SAVE 50 IN LAKE HORROR

By two South Boston men were played principal hero roles in the excursion steamship disaster on Lake Michigan, near Chicago, according to dispatches today.

Joseph Aloysius O'Bryan, formerly of No. 9 Telegraph street and a member of the old City Council, and William Hofnauer, who conducted a wool waste business in the Hub, aided in saving fifty lives when the steamer tipped and then sank.

O'Bryan is a brother of the Rev. D. Edward O'Bryan, curate at St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury. Another brother and two sisters live at No. 195 East Cottage street, Dorchester.

Hofnauer, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hofnauer of No. 423 East Seventh street, South Boston, was the hero of a gasoline explosion that destroyed The Scout, his $80,000 yacht, four year ago. Four members of the crew were rescued from below by Hofnaur himself. He and O'Bryan have been "pals" and co-workers since school days.

According to Hofnauer's parents, the yacht Doris used in the Chicago rescue work, is named after his only child, his inseparable companion.

Until 15 years ago, Hofnauer and O'Bryan lived in Boston where O'Bryan acted as secretary to Hofnauer, who amassed wealth in the wool waste industry.

SPEED TO THE RESCUE.

The firm was moved to Chicago and since that time both men have been living there. It was on Hofnauer's yacht that the two men were cruising the lake, with John E. Coath, president of the Chicago School Board, when they saw the steamship Favorite list over and go down.

"We were going to Wilmette a suburb of Chicago," said the three men in describing their part in the rescues.

"When we had gotten about 1,000 feet from shore, a terrific squall struck us. It was like a cyclone and it ripped and tore about us.

"We thought we were goners. Suddenly the wind let down and through a thin, whipping veil of rain and mist we could make out women and children struggling in the water.

"There was screaming, shrieking and horrible crying and wailing carried on the wet wind, which was so strong that our boat was forced backwards, although we had been progressing at the rate of 17 knots an hour.

LEAP TO SINKING SHIP.

"Captain Chris Carlson grabbed the wheel. We three jumped to the top deck of the Favorite and shouted at the women and children in an attempt to calm them somewhat and restore a semblance of order. Finally they did calm.

"Then, for forty-five minutes, we stood on the tilted, washing deck and lowered passengers down from the boat to the yacht, relaying them until it seemed our arms would never hold out, but would drop off. But we took all who were still on board.

"We then went around in the water and picked up half a dozen who were swimming or clinging to wood or lifebelts.

"After we had them all in so far as we could see, we started for the landing. One baby died on the way in from exhaustion and exposure."

BETTY ALDEN'S SOCIETY COMMENT

Stillington Players to Produce Play by Mrs. Whitman Next Month

HAVING ACHIEVED AN INSTANTANEOUS dramatic success with "The Intimate Strangers" and made themselves the theatrical darlings of the North Shore, the Stillington Players entrench themselves strongly within the hearts of the Smart Set by next producing a play from the pen of Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman. This clever young matron has written a comedy which she calls "Fool's Paradise," and the clever Stillington players put it on some time in August.

IF THEY PUT ON SUCH A TOP NOTCH performance with Mrs. Whitman's play as they are doing this week with Booth Tarkington's bright comedy of the Strangers, their fame will spread far outside the North Shore's confines. Audiences of the Smartest flock each evening to the Leslie Buswell playhouse atop a Gloucester hill. They see Mr. Buswell and his associates of the players put on a sparkling comedy with aplomb and finish that delights the eyes and ears of every spectator.

THE AUDIENCE LAST EVENING LAUGHED and applauded throughout the entire performance. Mrs. Whitman was there, of course, as business manager for the Stillington Players and as author and playwright. This handsome young woman (the former Adelaide Chatfield Taylor of Chicago), finds herself extremely busy. For last evening's show she was hostess to a number of the younger set, the boys and girls not yet officially in the social swim. And, as she was much of the time "back stage," her frock was not the formal evening creation but a sports affair of rose silk.

MISS BETTY MOULTON, DAUGHTER OF THE John Moultons, and one of the popular girls who came out last Winter, headed the usher squad recruited from the sub-deb set. Miss Polly Defries, daughter of Mrs. Thaddeus Defries, was one of the white frocked set that showed people to their places. So was Miss Phyllis Ellsworth, just recently back from Paris and the wedding there of her sister, the former Helen Ellsworth, and Alexander Shaw.

MRS. H. HALLET WHITMAN
The popular business manager of the Stillington Players has written a comedy which the players will produce next month.

THE YOUTHFUL SHAWS ARE lingering abroad on their honeymoon, and are just at the moment in London, being gloriously entertained. Their homecoming is quite indefinite. Paul Shaw (brother of Alexander Shaw) was in the Stillington audience last evening. Others of the younger set included Miss Katharine Winthrop, Miss Anne Dick and Miss Kitty Burrage. Miss Evelyn Cummings, debutante of two Winters ago, was there with her mother, Mrs. Charles K. Cummings. Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., Mrs. William DeFord Beal, Mrs. John L. Thorndike, the Misses Abbie and Belle Hunt, Mrs. Harriet Fearing, these are but a few of the regulars who are so enthusiastic about Stillington and its dramatics, its musicales and its operas.

ON WEDNESDAY EVENING Mrs. Neil Rantoul had a party for "The Intimate Strangers." Mrs. Quincy Bent of Annisquam brought her friends to the number of seven or so. Mr. and Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton were also in the Wednesday audience. On the opening night, Tuesday, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson brought a group of friends. The George Snell Mandells entertained. So did the Charles R. Codmans and the Sears B. Condits.

ON WEDNESDAY EVENING after having distinguished himself as the leading man of the Strangers, Mr. Buswell was host to more than a dozen guests at Del Montes, that popular dance rendezvous. Mr. Buswell has gathered about him an extremely clever company. To name the individuals who made hits would be to name the entire cast with, of course, a major share of the applause going to that charming young woman, Mrs. Fitz William Sargent of Philadelphia, a newcomer, and a most welcome one, to North Shore dramatics as served up at Stillington.

DUCE, 44, ITALY PRAYS FOR HIM

Rome, July 29 (A.P.).—Thousands of telgrams, letters and other messages of congratulation poured in upon the home of Premier Mussolini at his birthplace, Forli, on the occasion of his 44th birthday today.

The press unanimously voices a prayer that the Premier will be spared to the nation for many years.

(A dispatch from Cesena, near Forli, yesterday, said that Premier Mussolini had gone there to await the happy event of an addition to his family. He has three children now, but, like the late Theodore Roosevelt, is an advocate of large families and said that he hoped that there would be still more children in his home.)

BARONESS LUDWIG KNOOP RETURNS TO HUB SUNDAY

After an absence of eighteen years, Baroness Ludwig Knoop, formerly Emily Sargent of Back Bay and Magnolia society, is due to return on the Cunard liner Laconia when the vessel docks at East Boston Sunday afternoon. With her two daughters, the Misses Adele and Marlow, she will be met at the pier by Mrs. Ellerton P. Whitney of Brush Hill road, Milton, a sister, and Joseph Sargent, Hub attorney, her brother.

Among others returning on the Laconia are Hugh Bancroft, publisher of the News Bureau; Dr. Harvey Cushing and Lars Anderson.

MONT BLANC TO BE MONT MUSSOLINI

Rome, July 29 (A.P.)—Mont Blanc, highest peak of the Alps, is to be renamed Mont Benito Mussolini in honor of the Fascist Premier.

This was announced today with plans for the inauguration on the mountain of the first of a series of Alpine camps for training thousands of youthful Black Shirts of the Fascist University. The renaming of the mountain will take place August 12th.

FILM SALARIES WON'T BE CUT

Los Angeles, July 29 (A.P.).—Producer members of the academy on motion picture arts and science formally assured their employes of the definite abandonment of the 10 per cent. salary cut, which was announced several weeks ago and then held in abeyance at the request of the academy, pending efforts to reduce production costs.

The producers' pledge to discard definitely their plan to reduce costs by cutting salaries was made in behalf of his fellow-producers by Cecil B. De Mille, on condition that the academy adopt and approve the findings of the producers' branch of that organization relative to methods of achieving economy and greater efficiency in the industry.

BIDDLE WEDDING WAS "NO SURPRISE," SAYS HER MA

Kennebunkport, Me., July 29 (A.P.).—The marriage at Portsmouth, N. H., Tuesday, of Craig Biddle, Jr., of Philadelphia and Miss Alice J. Thompson of Albany, N. Y., was no surprise to anyone in Kennebunkport, Mrs. James McNaughton Thompson, the bride's mother, said today at her Summer residence here. Mrs. Thompson said she knew about the plans of the young couple and that while their marriage may have been unexpected in Philadelphia, as reported, it was no "news" to friends here. The couple are on a motor trip through Maine.

HOLD TWO CHARGED WITH MURDER OF O'HIGGINS

London, July 29 (A.P.).—An Exchange telegraph dispatch from Dublin says it was learned today that two men were taken before the Dublin District Court last night charged with the murder of Vice President Kevin O'Higgins on July 10.

The dispatch says the men, who gave their names as Owen Donnelly, 25, and Thomas Merrigan, 58, were remanded in custody for one week.

URGES TUNNEL TO CONNECT CITY AND AIRPORT

Immediate start upon a vehicular tunnel to East Boston, development of passenger and mail service to Latin America, and establishment of numerous short local air lines out of Boston are recommendations of John J. Martin, director of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, as urgently needed for the Boston Airport.

By JOHN J. MARTIN
President of the Exchange Trust Company, Boston

The foresight which brought about the establishment of the Boston Airport, practically in the heart of Metropolitan Boston, should be applied at this time to urgently needed improvements and developments of that port.

The greatest future possibilities of the Airport with reference to commercial flying lie to the South. Boston, more than any other American port, is closely linked with the commercial destinies of Latin America. The need for speedy passenger and mail traffic between Boston and the Canal Zone, Cuba, the Bahamas, and the west coast of South America is growing more important day by day.

We are bringing in South America's hides, coffee, wool, copper and other products. Our banking connections with the South American countries are very thoroughly established. New England absorbs huge imports of sugar, fruits and raw materials, but our export business to the Latin countries must be developed.

NEW ENGLAND PRODUCTS.

They need New England made shoes, New England machinery, New England tools and electrical appliances, and they will gladly accept them rather than maintain the three-cornered arrangement which prevails today to so large a degree, with the flow of commerce from America to Europe; Europe to South America; and South America to the United States.

J. J. Martin

There is nothing which can compare with the airplane as a commercial ambassador to goodwill and understanding. Frequent service for passengers and mail from Boston will put our city and the entire New England area at the doors of the South and Central American market.

Perhaps of equal importance to the Latin American possibilities, however, is the aspect of local flights. The public is awakened to the vast improvements which have been made in air craft, both as applies to safety and to efficient transportation of freight and passengers. The people realize that aviation has gone beyond the experimental stage, and is an accomplished factor in the modern commercial scheme of things.

VALUE OF SHORT FLIGHTS.

In this development, it is essential not to lose sight of the tremendous value of the airplane for short local flights. Take, for example, the hop from Cape Ann to Cape Cod. Gloucester to Provincetown is less than forty miles by air; but it is nearly four times that distance by land, with annoying changes of train and long delays.

The greatest need of the Airport at the present time is adequate transportation facilities. Croydon, the airport of London, is 20 miles out, yet passengers are at their destination within a half an hour after landing from Paris. The passenger facilities to and from the field are excellent.

We should develop our transportation facilities to East Boston, with the Airport as the central thought. Plans should be prepared immediately for a vehicular tunnel to take the place of the antiquated ferries and the roundabout Charlestown-Chelsea bridge route from the city proper.

Soviet Trade With America Shows Big Increase

Washington, July 29 (A.P.).—American exports to Soviet Russia during the first six months of the year amounted to $37,327,620, an increase of 44 per cent. over last year, it was shown in figures published by the Soviet Union Information Bureau.

The statement gave the following export figures based on reports from American-Soviet trading organizations:

Cotton $24,515,382; metals $3,302,334; tractors and parts $3,415,003; other agricultural machinery $1,450,633; industrial machinery about $2,500,000.

The figures include $606,133 of oil well machinery and $338,675 of electrical machinery.

AUTOPSY SHOWS BULLETS IN FUGITIVE'S BODY

St. Albans, Vt., July 29 (A. P.).—The report of the autopsy on the body of Winston Titus, 20, who met death while being pursued by two immigration officers shows that two bullets went through the boy's body, Attorney-General J. Ward Carver announced today.

SAYS U. S. FACES 3 FINANCIAL PROBLEMS

Williamstown, July 29 (A.P.)—Inter-allied debts, Latin America and China, were subjects of round table discussion at the Institute of Politics today.

Dr. Joseph S. Davis of Stanford University declared of the three great financial problems now facing America—inter-allied debts, German reparations and private investment abroad by Americans—none has been permanently settled and no consensus of understanding has been reached.

Dr. Walter Maclaren, executive secretary of the institute, expressed the opinion that neither Vice-President Dawes nor Owen D. Young, in formulating the German reparations agreement, believed it would constitute a definite settlement of the problem.

Professor W. R. Shepherd, of Columbia University, declared that the United States in its relations with the southern republics will either regard them as "spheres of interest" for the United States alone, or an American society of nations will arise in which "reasonable parity of advancement, a thorough mutuality of sentiment, and the maintenance of a spirit of good will may restore between the United States and its southern fellows the new world community of independent sovereign nations that existed a century ago."

Professor Harold S. Quigley, of the University of Minnesota, declared China's main problem to be the formation of a central, stable government, with which the powers may deal.

HAINES' CO-OPERATIVE AUGUST FURNITURE SALE

I. E. PINNIS, Sales Manager
"During my 21 years of experience in the furniture business I have never before had the privilege of taking part in a more real, sincere, value-giving plan than Haines' Co-operative August Sale. Everybody has 'pitched in,' employees, factories and all, and the result is an overflow of bargains for YOU!"

F. TAYLOR

"Though I have seen 16 years of experience in the furniture business, 'Haines' Co-operative August Sale' sets a new mark of achievement as far as high grade merchandise and unusual reductions are concerned!"

MR. KRUMSHEID
Head Dining Dept.
"Our great 'Co-operative August Sale' commences tomorrow, bringing to you dining room reductions the like of which I have not seen equalled in my 9 years of furniture selling!"

MR. C. TODARO
Head Rug Department
In my many years of service in the furniture field I have seen great "sales" sponsored, but I have never yet taken part in one such as this one where more real effort has been extended to give the "customer" real, unusual value.

MR. M. HURBIT
Asst. Sales Mgr.
A visit to our "Co-operative August Sale" will convince you of my sincerity when I say my 13 years of furniture experience has not yet equalled this sale.

MR. J. MALING
Head Living Room Dept.
The firm has asked me to use my blue pencil liberally on all living room suites. I have done so—the prices now are lower than I can recall during my 17 years of furniture experience.

Mr. Pierce
Mdse. Manager
I consider myself very fortunate in being one of the sponsors of this great event. For careful preparation, shrewd buying and resulting low prices, this sale surpasses any similar event I can recall during my 12 years in the furniture business.

BOTTOMLEY SERVES FIVE YEARS FOR BOND THEFT

London, July 29 (A.P.)—Horatio Bottomley, widely-known wartime figure in Great Britain, former member of Parliament, lecturer and financier, was released from Maidstone Prison today, where he had been serving a seven-year term for fraudulently converting to his own use £5,000 subscribed to a Victory Loan Bond Club which he formed while a member of the House of Commons.

Good behavior resulted in Bottomley's release after serving slightly more than five years of his sentence.

AUGUST FUR SALE

QUESTION:

ARE YOU CAPABLE OF SELECTING AN HONEST, WELL-MADE GOOD-WEARING COAT OR ARE YOU GOING TO PURCHASE A SO-CALLED PRICE COAT IRRESPECTIVE OF QUALITY?

Protection For Our Customers

Unless you read every word of this advertisement you are missing valuable information so badly needed when purchasing a fur coat.

1—Our customers are the middle or working-class.
2—We must necessarily give them the best protection we have to offer
3—Our customers cannot afford to purchase a new coat each season caused by lack of knowledge of the fur industry.
4—Fur chemists of today can dye furs of the cheapest grade to imitate fine raccoons, Hudson seals (dyed muskrat), beavers, squirrels, sables, caraculs, etc., etc., etc.
5—The public know little or nothing as to what is meant by this, that or the other section, referring to Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat), raccoons, natural muskrats, beavers, minks, rabbits, opossums, etc.

Just One Illustration

A southern coon skin might be purchased for $2.00, while a northern or a Minnesota coon skin would cost from $16.00 to $17.00. This comparison may be applied to all furs heretofore mentioned, and for this reason together with inferior trimmings, workmanship, linings, etc., we find in our industry such a tremendous variance in the way of prices.

Our Money Back Guarantee

Our money back guarantee goes with every coat which we offer for sale and we now publicly announce that any Hudson Seal coat that has been purchased from this firm within the last five years will be repaired free of charge in case it is necessary. Squirrels excluded.

PRICES

We believe our prices are the lowest in Boston consistent with the quality of the merchandise we offer and the protection we guarantee.

BRITAIN WILL OFFER A NEW NAVY PLAN

London, July 29 (A.P.).—The British Cabinet convened late this afternoon after having been hastily summoned; several ministers who were en route to the country for the weekend were recalled.

Geneva, Switzerland, July 29 (A. P.).—Suggestion, which, the British claim, might solve the present difficulty over eight-inch gun cruisers and by the same token save the tripartite naval conference came today from British circles.

This suggestion is that the American delegation ask for the right to build more eight-inch guns secondary cruisers than is provided under the British plan submitted yesterday and that the British would look favorably upon such a proposal if the British total tonnage in cruisers were raised in proportion.

FOR NEW U. S. CRUISERS.

Under this plan the United States would probably build three or four eight-inch cruisers to counterbalance the British cruiser York and four British cruisers of the Hawkins class, it was said.

This latest British suggestion, which apparently has no official standing as yet, is said to constitute the willingness of the British to discuss America's right to construct four or five additional warships of this type.

According to information obtained in authoritative circles, Lord Cecil, member of the British delegation, during yesterday's private session of the principal delegates, suggested an adjournment of the conference for about six months to permit time for reflection.

He was represented as expressing the opinion that such an adjournment would be much better from every standpoint than an indefinite abjournment without results. Meanwhile there was a possibility that the projected plenary session called for Monday may not be held until Wednesday.

PARLEYS NEAR CRISIS.

Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation, wants ample time to exchange messages with Washington and if the American delegation is not ready by Monday for presentation of its views on the British plan, he may possibly request a postponement of the plenary session.

The conference was generally regarded today in a critical, if not hopeless, situation with the only ray of light suggestions from British circles that they are still open to proposals provided that these do not affect the fundamentals of the British plan which they say must be retained.

Speeder Is Freed When He Walks to Quincy Court

This story sounds "all wet," but it is vouched for by court records.

Irwin Ellis of Duxbury had an engagement in Quincy District Court today to answer to a charge of speeding while driving a farm truck.

Ellis drove the truck from Duxbury to Boston with farm produce and then walked to Quincy. He arrived late, but having told his story to Judge Nash, his case was placed on file.

Tip to speeders: Walk to court.

U. S. to Build 18 Big Cruisers if Parley Fails

Washington, July 29 (A.P.).—With adjournment of the three-power naval conference without agreement forecast in Washington official circles, speculation as to the course of the administration in dealing with naval expansion at the Winter session of Congress already has displaced discussion of the Geneva developments.

All officials appear to agree that the failure of the conversations would place a weapon of extraordinary value in the hands of the "big navy" men in Congress.

There is no doubt among administration leaders that efforts by individual members of both House and Senate to set up a program of competitive building against the British cruiser plans is to be expected.

The administration basis for new construction is generally expected to be an estimate of naval needs that ignore as far as possible the British program. There are indications that such an estimate might include a total of 18 to 20 of the 10,000 ton cruisers, the main point of difference between British and Americans at Geneva.

Construction of ten or twelve additional ships over the eight already authorized might be spread over ten or more years.

The tables of construction worked out by the British admiralty have been described as calling ultimately for two 8,000 ton ships for each 10,000 tonner laid down. If that proportion holds good Great Britain would need 20 to 25 ten thousand tonners to form one-third of a fleet of 70 to 75 cruisers, the number the British at Geneva have contended was necessary due to the geographical and economic factors involved in assuring security for British essential trade routes.

M'MILLAN'S DRIVER GETS HOME; FINDS MOTHER DEAD

Wiscasset, Me., July 29 (A.P.)—Returning to his home at Jack Lane's Bay, 30 miles north of Hopedale, Northern Labarador, Abram Bromfield, dog driver and interpreter for members of Donald B. MacMillan's Arctic expeditions found his mother had died during his visit to the United States, a message from Charles S. Sewell of Wiscasset, a member of the party, reported.

Bromfield, as a guest of Lieut Commander MacMillan, during his first contact with American civilization, visited radio shows in Boston, New York and Chicago and was entertained extensively by friends of the explorer.

TICKET BROKERS GUILTY IN $687,000 TAX FRAUDS

New York, July 29 (A.P.).—Twenty-three theatre ticket brokers indicted as a result of the recent inquiry into frauds in income tax returns pleaded guilty today in Federal Court.

Besides bail of $1,000 each, the brokers were required to post sums aggregating $687,000 to cover the amount of the indebtedness to the government due to false returns.

DAWES' TRAIN IN WRECK; ONE DEAD

chairman of the board of the Illinois Central Railroad, returned soon after the special train left Greenville, Miss., where Vice-President Dawes addressed the State convention of the American Legion last night. The train was bound for Memphis.

Sam Jones of Memphis, engineer of the train, was killed. His fireman, J. F. Horton, also of Memphis, was seriously injured, as was also Henry Fletcher of Greenville, traveling engineer of the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad.

The trestle which gave way spanned a drainage ditch which carried about 18 feet of water. The wooden structure crumpled beneath the impact of the heavy locomotive. The engine was completely submerged.

Messages from the scene of the accident stated that the train was running at low speed, due to the weakened condition of the roadbed as a result of the floods which have swept the territory.

Ben Ames Williams of Chestnut Hill road, Brookline, writer, was in the party of Vice-President Dawes on a fishing trip in New Mexico until about ten days ago. The Boston author has returned, however, and is at his Summer home on Beaver Island, Lake Winnipesaukee, N. H.

SOCIETY GIRL STUDENT TAKES HER LIFE BY GAS

New York, July 29 (I.N.S.).—Following extensive readings in philosophy and religion, Miss Helen Oatman, 20, beautiful society girl and student, committed suicide today in her mother's apartment at 64 West 93rd street.

Miss Oatman, formerly of Philadelphia was a niece of A. P. Frymier, millionaire contractor of New York. She was alone in the apartment. Neighbors tracing the odor of gas found the girl clad in a negligee, her head in the oven of a gas stove.

HUMIDITY DUE FOR KNOCKOUT TOMORROW

unfortunates chained to the treadmill of business were wilted and sticky, and a great exodus to the beaches and other "alleged" cool resorts got under way early.

In offices collars were shucked, electric fans were in tremendous demand, and fat men dolorously wished they might take off their flesh and sit in their bones.

As the heat grew more intense Acting Mayor John J. Heffernan ordered City Hall closed at 3 p. m., only a skeleton force of clerks to be retained until the regular closing time. He also requested the fire commissioner to keep the hydrant sprinklers going, together with the flushing of congested streets. The park department was asked to keep open the bathhouses as long as possible, and the usual plans were made to transport free of charge on the ferry-boats mothers and babies.

For the first time in nine successive weeks the weather man promised fair skies and sunshine for the week-end, although vacationists and trippers were warned that chilly nights may be expected in northern New England over Sunday.

The official forecast for Boston and vicinity reads: Probable thunderstorms this afternoon or tonight; cooler late tonight; Saturday fair and cooler; moderate southwest, shifting to northwest, winds.

Old Man Humidity refused to be sent to the bench even by the rip-roaring early morning thunderstorm and a precipitation of .09 of an inch.

Most folks had a fairly comfortable night, barring mosquitoes, which some Greater Boston residents claim, with a little cultivation, might be used for clay pigeons at trap shoots. The temperature did not go above 75 in the night, while the maximum yesterday was 88 between 3 and 4 p. m.

Bite yourself an Alphabet

How to bite a good B

B has been bitten in one bite by old, experienced pretzeleers. But it takes skill. You've got to hold your teeth just right. Every O-So-Gud is so blessed crisp and crunchy.

Be careful on B. Use a sharp decisive bite on the wide turn and you should get a B something like this or this:

The rewards of pretzeleering are two-fold. (1) Food. (2) Fun.

O-So-Gud Pretzels are baked brown, baked brittle, baked crisp, baked easy to digest. They're salty and crunchy and quite the thing with soup, salad, hors d'oeuvres, dessert, between meals and all the other times you like to eat. Children like them a lot—and they like children.

Both professional and amateur pretzeleers like O-So-Guds, the twisty pretzels made by the Uneeda Bakers. Taste better, they say.

POLICE GUARD BUD'S 'CINDERELLA BRIDE'

A Story of Sylvia Bryant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, society woman and wife of Vance Ackerman, a rich broker, appeals to a mutual friend, Alexander Ladd, a successful lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd proposes that Mrs. Ackerman engage Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, a beautiful and charming young girl, as her social secretary. Mrs. Ackerman agrees and Ladd summons Sylvia.

Sylvia finally consents and her father and mother are very much pleased.

Ackerman calls for her, introduces her to Margot Liggett and takes her to his home.

CHAPTER 5

SYLVIA stopped. Jimmie Devlin was waiting. "You needn't take me up to the door," she said to Stuart Gifford.

"Why not?"

"Because I'd rather you didn't. Isn't that sufficient reason?"

Gifford bowed. "Quite," he said with instant gentility. He stopped and took off his hat, at parting. "I'm afraid I talked rather foolish tonight," he said apologetically. "Many thanks for brightening up an otherwise dull evening."

He took Sylvia's hand and gave it a quick, firm goodnight clasp. Turning his back squarely, he walked away. Sylvia liked the way he did it; there had been no attempt to prolong things.

Beyond any question, she realized, she was attracted to Stuart Gifford. His charm was inescapable. He reminded her of a polished piece of statuary, yet warm and alive. In contrast to Alexander Ladd, however, he was almost weak—but then, Ladd was different from other men; he was hewn out of granite . . . charged with a tigerish energy. . . .

Strange, the different types of men she had contacted lately; Ladd with his hard, fierce brilliance; the pinkishly plump Vance Ackerman, Stuart Gifford with his good looks and youth. Three of them, all different yet curiously alike in the self-assurance—the thinly concealed arrogance that sprang, Sylvia imagined, from the smugness of possessed wealth. Yes, even Joyce Ackerman, her new employer, had it, too—that slightly, wholly unconscious, dictatorial manner.

And Jimmie Devlin. He stood now by the doorway waiting for her, slender, intense. Smoky resentment was in his eyes.

"Who was that guy?" he demanded. "Gee, Sylvia, you go out with one fellow and come back with another."

He was wild about her and she knew it. Therefore, she was gentle with him. "No one you need get all steamed up about, Jimmie," she smiled. "Have you been waiting around here all the time since I went out?"

"Oh, sure—why not?" He looked at her, devotedly. "It's too late now to take in a movie. What say we go over to the Chinese place and get some chop suey?"

"I'd rather not," she said, "but if you want to come upstairs I think maybe I can dig up something out of the icebox."

They let themselves into the apartment and moved about cautiously, speaking with lowered voices so as not to disturb her sleeping parents. This was a social life to which Sylvia was accustomed. They closed the tiny dining room off from the other rooms and sat at the table eating jam on bread and butter and drinking hot chocolate. Here was no straining, no keyed-up tension. And there was something nice about Jimmie; he was a pal of her own environment.

He partook sparingly of the food before him.

"You're not eating," she said. "Pitch in."

"I'm thinking," he responded. "Those fellows you were with tonight—both rich guys, aren't they?"

"If anybody but you spoke in that insinuating, critical manner I'd box his ears," Sylvia declared. "I'm not a poor but pure stenographer being lured to destruction by the hellhounds of high society. I've simply got a new job and those men you saw tonight seem to be a part of it—but a very small part."

She told him, succinctly, of her new position with Joyce Ackerman.

"That's the end," he said dismally.

"Oh, don't be so perfectly idiotic!" she said sharply.

"I mean it's the end for me hanging around you," he said. "You'll get in with that money crowd and I won't be able to stand the competition. For myself, I can't kick. I know you can't see me—you never could, Sylvia. I was licked before I started. If I had a million dollars I honestly don't think you'd marry me. That's just my hard luck. But I hate to think of you getting mixed up with the gang."

"Be yourself, Jimmie. They're not gunmen, or anything like that."

"If they were you'd have sense

6 FAINT, 1 HURT, IN CRUSH TO SEE LINDY

Rochester, N. Y., July 29 (I.N.S.).—Six women fainted and a child was injured today during a stampede of 75,000 persons gathered to greet Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The flying colonel arrived at 11 a. m. and left an hour later for Buffalo.

HOP OF 'OLD GLORY' AID TO PEACE

Round-Trip Venture Backed by Hearst Seen as Knitting Ties Between Hemispheres

The coming flight from New York to Rome and return of the William Randolph Hearst Boston Evening American plane "Old Glory," which is attracting the attention of the civilized world, was enthusiastically endorsed by prominent Bostonians today.

It was hailed as a move in the direction of world peace, and a venture which will seal the friendship of not only two great nations, but of Europe in general.

The prospective flight is in line with the recent move by Mr. Hearst to bring about an alliance between English speaking nations.

IS 'GOOD WILL HOP'

This suggestion was received with much favor by Great Britain, and was accepted as the initial impulse in a practical direction towards world peace.

CHAMBERLIN IN LEVIATHAN HOP ON MONDAY

Washington, July 29 (A.P.).—Clarence Chamberlin, transatlantic flier, will undertake his experimental hop from the Leviathan Monday while the giant liner is speeding from New York to Europe.

The vessel will leave her pier at 12:01 a. m. and Chamberlin will take off at 6 a. m. when the ship is 60 miles off Ambrose Light.

Orders were issued to the Newport base by the Navy Department today for two destroyers to meet the Leviathan and render any necessary assistance. If the takeoff is successful, the pilot plans to fly to Hasbrouck Heights, N. J.

Chamberlin will takeoff from a runway built diagonally across the Leviathan between the bridge and the first smokestack. The runway is 110 feet long and 240 feet wide. At the time of the takeoff the Leviathan will be going 24 knots an hour, the cruising speed in transatlantic voyages.

The purpose of this hop is to determine the practicability of sending passengers or mail or both from the ship to land when the liner is still at sea, thus cutting the time for voyages.

HIT COOLIDGE'S 'PROFITLESS' PROSPERITY

New Haven, Conn., July 29 (I. N. S.).—A direct slap at "Coolidge economy" came out of his native New England today with the Connecticut State Chamber of Commerce directors on record as declaring the country is in a grip of "profitless prosperity" and demanding a reduction of the 13½ per cent. corporation tax.

The board pointed out in its annual meeting here that the nation's treasury shows the largest surplus in history, also that customs revenues likewise have reached record proportions, yet the wealth "lies in Washington and not with the citizens and the industries where it belongs."

"Connecticut business concerns request this reduction because present business competition has greatly reduced profits resulting in so-called 'profitless prosperity,' thus making the corporation taxation rate unduly burdensome," the resolution said.

New York, July 29 (A.P.).—Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, widow of the founder of the New York World, died today at Deauville, France, after an illness of less than a week.

STILLMANS DODGING CURIOUS

Bud and Lena "Hiding Out" on the Reporters as They Await Honeymoon Boat

New York, July 29.—Two policemen stood guard today outside the Shelton Hotel to prevent the curious from troubling the former Lena Wilson, Canadian Cinderella bride of "Bud" Stillman.

Young Stillman was attending to business affairs during the day in preparation for the honeymoon trip to Europe.

"Bud" Stillman and his bride are spending the time that elapses before they sail in seclusion in the apartment of Fowler McCormick, best man at their wedding, in the Shelton.

The couple sail Sunday on the Olympic for France, when they will use the same honeymoon suite occupied by Bud's father and mother after their reconciliation. Later they will visit England.

The couple managed to evade reporters when they arrived from Montreal. They went out once to visit the sub-treasury and attended to their passports. "Bud" is traveling on an American passport, but Lena, being a British subject, has only an affidavit that she is his wife.

To the one reporter who managed to see them, Bud told of their plans on returning from Europe. They will set up housekeeping in Boston and Bud will enter Harvard Medical School.

Even before he entered Princeton he had in mind becoming a doctor, he said.

Bud defended his mother's action in heaving crockery at the motion picture photographers during the wedding.

"I don't blame her on bit," he said. The way they acted was terrible. Even when we was cutting the cake they kept pushing their machines right up on us until all I could see was a row of cameras with men behind them grinding away at the cranks."

OFFICER IN FIGHT NABS MAN AND MOONSHINE

A carboy of alleged moonshine and an officer with a battered head and other injuries are all that the North Weymouth police have today to show for a lively battle on Nantasket road before daybreak, between Motorcycle Officer Norman Butler and a man who was booked as Stephen Samoral of Heywood street, Bridgewater, on charges of assault upon an officer and illegal transportation of liquor, and then released.

When his case was called in Quincy District court later, he failed to appear. According to Officer Butler he came upon Samoral's automobile parked beside the road. A battle followed for two carboys of supposed moonshine. Butler was kicked in the abdomen and beaten up with a hammer handle. One of the carboys was smashed, but Butler saved one and arrested his man.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

South's second rebid of Clubs without support from partner was justified by his holding. North's assist, following the second rebid, was also sound in view of his holding of four cards of his partner's suit, and the King and Queen of Diamond's. South's bid to five Clubs was made with reasonable expectation of scoring game, his partner having shown some strength, or at least of sustaining but negligible loss.

East's rebid of Hearts before showing his Spades was sound. His bid of three Spades was made with the object of showing his partner the two-suited character of his hand, and with the intention of bidding four Hearts should his partner not support Spades, or if Spades were doubled, or if forced to bid higher by adverse bidding. His bid to four Hearts, though palpably an overbid, was fully justified to save what semed to be a probable game for the opponents if played at Clubs and also because of his compensating honors.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

KEEN-EYED POLICEMAN DELIVERS DEATH MESSAGE

The keen eyes of a Boston traffic officer sent John Banks, a visiting autoist from Homestead, Ill., home to his dying mother today. Banks was spotted in Governor Square by Traffic Officer Harry King of Division 21, who had been on the watch for the man since morning.

The message was received by the police at 5:12 p. m. yesterday from J. L. Banks of Pittsburgh. It read: "Please lok out for gray Essex car with Illinois license. Tell occupant named John Banks to come to Homestead immediately, mother dying."

MOTHER CALLS AIMEE CRAZY

Los Angeles, July 29 (I.N.S.).—"I have no intention whatever of leaving Angelus Temple."

Emphatically, Aimee Semple McPherson today denied reports she intended to resign because of a bitter war between herself and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

She admitted she had suggested she would resign, but the idea was "overwhelmingly" vetoed by her church.

While, Mrs. McPherson made her denial, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, was issuing a statement in which she declared that her daughter, "must be crazy."

"She talks about my brain being overstrained, she should look after her own," declared Mrs. Kennedy.

Abandoning her plans to take a long rest Mrs. McPherson said she would travel—all over the nation, in her work.

"TIRED OF SLIPPING BACK," LYNN MAN TAKES POISON

After writing a note to his wife, Catherine, in which he stated, "I am tired of slipping back," James A. Shaw, Summer street, Lynn, today swallowed a powerful poison tablet and lay down on his bed to die.

Hearing him groaning, Mrs. Shaw went to the room and after reading the message called the police. Shaw was removed to Lynn Hospital, where he was given emergency treatment by Dr. William L. Frazer and his name placed on the danger list.

Concerning Our Annual August
Fur
Opening
Beginning Next Monday

OUR separate fur department for Misses will be of great interest to the school and college girl, the business girl, and the young woman. Here she will find an entire department of fur coats designed specially for the small figure. Many of them are in furs adapted to hard wear (comparatively inexpensive) as well as the dressier fur coats.

A Miss likes to buy her fur coat in August—have it ready for the football season — or if she is going away to school, she likes to have her Mother help make the selection at this time.

In our August Fur Opening this year, we are presenting in this special department the finest fur coats for Misses that we have ever been able to secure. Jaunty and effective—a type by themselves—smart and youthful.

These Misses coats are cut on exactly the right lines, the most graceful lines, and at the same time have that little touch of sport character that every Miss wants. They have just the right turn of the cuffs, the style of the collar, and the general cut of the coat, which only an artist can give to a fur garment.

The French designers of fur coats have great regard for the Miss, and our inspiration for these Misses Fur Coats were taken from the approved Paris models.

These have been made up in the most popular of furs, and the price of these smart coats in the coming August Fur Opening, will be most attractive. They have all the snap and go, all the best workmanship that could be assembled in the making of these coats.

At Calais d'Artagnan found he could not leave France without a pass from the Cardinal. Another traveler had one, and d'Artagnan waylaid him and demanded it. In the struggle both men were wounded, but d'Artagnan won and took possession of the pass. He and his lackey, Planchet, hastened on board the ship for England.

Next day he reached London, and gave Buckingham a note from the Queen requesting the studs. But when the Duke went for them, two were gone! Milady de Winter, an agent of the Cardinal, had stolen them. The Duke's jeweler made two more in two days, and d'Artagnan left for Paris with them, in a race against time.

The Duke provided relays of horses in France, and d'Artagnan, riding fast, arrived in Paris the night before the fete. Next night the Queen wore her studs on her shoulder. She enjoyed herself, but the Cardinal was in a wretched humor. As for d'Artagnan, he was rewarded by the Queen with a magnificent diamond ring.

Next, d'Artagnan planned to see Constance. He arranged to meet her at St. Cloud the following evening, but when he arrived he found she had been kidnaped again. In the description of the abductor he recognized again the mysterious man who had insulted him at Meung.

NEW ENGLAND OIL LEADER 'GETS BUSY'

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Herbert Lee Pratt, president of the Standard Oil Company of New York, the corporation that covers New England as well as the Empire State, is "getting busy" in the so-called "oil war." President Pratt sails for England Saturday, and his friends believe he will meet Sir Henri Deterding, the British oil king, in furtherance of the peace move now under way.

HERBERT LEE PRATT

Mr. Pratt was graduated from Amherst, the same college that sponsors President Coolidge. His ancestors trailed the Mayflower across the Atlantic. He is a trustee of Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, which was founded by his father to supply technical instruction to students of limited means. Motor tourists may have seen the Pratt Summer camp at Chesham, N. H., near the Summer residence of Wellington Wells, president of the Massachusetts State Senate. The Pratt boys started the second radio broadcasting station in the Granite State.

* * *

President Samuel Vauclain of Baldwin is leaving Pennsylvania today on a fortnight's trip. Mr. Vauclain never seems to take a vacation, but only trips. As a matter of fact, he is always on the alert for new business. The latest rumors have nominated him for the Westinghouse Electric chairmanship, made vacant by the death of Gen. Guy E. Tripp. The position is now being temporarily filled by Paul D. Cravath, and some rumors have it that Mr. Cravath will continue to hold the post.

UNION TOBACCO JUMPS 5 POINTS TO NEW TOP

On the New York Curb the outstanding feature was the five-point advance in Union & United Tobacco to a new high of 95. Early this year these "Schulte shares" sold at 64. The company was organized late last year by the Whelan-Schulte group primarily as a holding company with its principal interest in manufacturing. When organized it was planned to concentrate upon the development of new brands. The company has holdings in Schulte Retail Stores, Tobacco Products, United Cigar Stores and Porto Rican American Tobacco.

NEW HAVEN AFTER O. K. FOR NEW PREFERRED

New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has applied to Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue $49,036,700 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock. Proceeds will be used to reduce indebtedness to United States government amounting to $87,000,000, of which $60,000,000 due in 1930 and $27,030,000 due in 1930-35.

BROKERS' loans total of $3,141,193,000 as of July 27 compares with $3,055,974,000 as of July 20.

PRICE IS PAID BY ALL WHO REACH TOP

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Supremacy costs. That is the thought begotten by the triumphant return from Europe of another world-beating American, Bobby Jones. The crowd sees only the conquering hero brilliantly victorious over all rivals, his every movement on the historic St. Andrews Golf course eagerly watched by thousands and read by millions. They see him wildly acclaimed as a twice-crowned king carried from the field of his laurels on enthusiastic shoulders, see him presented with the most coveted trophy of the golfing world and hear his fame applauded all over the civilized world.

B. C. Forbes

His welcome-home probably will rank in cordiality with that accorded Commander Byrd and his intrepid companions, and his fame extends probably as far towards the ends of the earth as that of Lindbergh.

* * *

BOBBY Jones has paid and still pays a higher price than the crowd knows anything of. That most faithful chronicler of the golf champion's achievements, O. B. Keeler, intimated that, immediately the grueling ordeal was over, Bobby Jones hastened into privacy "for rest and nausea."

There you have a glimpse behind the glory, a glimpse into the realities.

AFTER HIS winning of the American championship at Columbus, I played with Bobby Jones over his home course, and what he then confided caused me to write this:

"Straight from the field of his memorable conquest at Columbus went a wrought-up, worn-out, nerve-exhausted young man to his hotel, locked his door, threw himself upon his bed, suffered such a violent physical upheaval.

"Bobby Jones, the strain of intense effort over, crying like a child, is a picture the world didn't see, but a picture worth putting before the youth of America who have beheld and considered only the glory, not the cost, of victory.

"Do you imagine that, having defeated the world's best players on both sides of the Atlantic, he is content with his game and feels no necessity for striving to improve it? He told me: "Every time I go on the golf course I try something new.

"I almost envy men like yourself who go out and thoroughly enjoy the game, without bothering very much whether you play every shot well or not. It ceases to become play when you get into a championship contest. It's the hardest of hard efforts. It takes everything you have out of you. The strain is terrific. It's worst of all when you're winning, when you are in the lead. You are fearful lest you make a single mistake. It's not so hard when you are behind, because you feel that, having nothing to lose, you can take chances—just as you must often have noticed that people without much money are readier to speculate and run risks than men have have a large amount of money to invest; they usually go in for conservative investments."

BOSTONIANS SEE ROME HOP AS PEACE AID

ing from previous transatlantic hops, is dedicated chiefly to the purpose of extending the hand of fellowship by the American people to those of Italy.

Commenting on the venture, Daniel J. Harkins, New England passenger manager of the Hamburg-American line and the United American line, said:

"The proposed flight of 'Old Glory' is one of the most patriotic moves yet undertaken, in my opinion and the opinion of friends with whom I have talked of the flight.

CHRISTENING SUNDAY.

"'Old Glory,' what a name to conjure with! In the days of America's glory on the seas, Old Glory was carried to every port on ships. Today American aviators are carrying that same Old Glory to new triumphs for the United States.

"Mr. Hearst's venture in sending his new 'Old Glory' to Rome is to be commended. It is a step towards further cementing the close friendship that the intrepid birdmen are bringing to the old and new worlds."

With statesmen of two nations present, the big silver monoplane will be christened Sunday afternoon at Roosevelt Field, L. I.

DAVISON TO BE THERE.

Leaders of the American and Italian governments will attend this ceremony and extend their blessings and good wishes to the Fokker goodwill plane, and to Lloyd Bertaud and James DeWitt Hill of the United States air mail, who will share control on the flight.

F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, in charge of aviation, has wired from Washington:

"I will be delighted to attend the christening of 'Old Glory' on Sunday afternoon."

The Italian Ambassador to America, Giacomo de Martino, will represent his country. A telegram from Signor de Martino reveals the interest Premier Mussolini and his countrymen are taking in the project. The telegram reads:

"I am happy to inform you I will attend the christening of 'Old Glory' and that Signor Mussolini has directed me to represent him at the ceremony."

The air forces of Italy will be represented by Commander Silvio Scaroni, air attache with the Italian embassy in Washington.

ON TEST FLIGHT, TOO.

Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett of Brooklyn Navy Yard will extend the good wishes of the navy, and Major-General James H. McRae, commander of the Second Corps Area, with headquarters on Governor's Island, the army.

An Italian girl, American born, who will typify the spirit of friendship between America and the home of her forefathers, will christen the golden-winged bird.

Following the introduction of the fliers, both of whom were in the army flying corps during the war, they will fly "Old Glory" so that all may see the big plane.

'WHEELERISM' SEEN AS MENACE

questioned the Maryland Governor about it.

The Governor made it clear he was not averse to discussing prohibition in general, "nor the broader question of governmental power versus individual rights."

TURNS WHEELER DOWN.

"I congratulate your great institution," he wrote Dean R. D. Hollister, "upon its purpose to provide a neutral forum for the discussion of this perplexing national problem, and I feel sincerely complimented that you should think me worthy to participate.

"There are several reasons which in any event might prevent my accepting your invitation, but I feel that in candor I should give you the one that makes it impossible for me to do so.

"While personally I believe our prohibition friends are taking the wrong track and are not only injuring the cause of true temperance, but are also doing harm to the very character and substance of our government, nevertheless I recognize that there are many fair and sincere men and women, for whom I have the utmost respect, who differ with me, and with whom it would be an honor to debate if I could arrange it.

"WHEELER NEVER DEBATES."

"But to be entirely frank I cannot bring myself to feel that way about Mr. Wheeler. He is the paid protagonist of a cause, a professional propagandist, a special pleader pure and simple.

"That is his privilege, of course, but I cannot conceive of him for one moment as seriously considering the views of his opponent, however sincere, or as regarding any debate as an impersonal and disinterested effort to test out the truth. So far as I know he never debates. He proclaims, dictates, abuses, threatens and collects. And to my way of thinking 'Wheelerism' is coming to be a real menace in this country."

SEEKS SANE SOLUTION.

"I am very deeply interested in the subject of prohibition, not because it involves a controversy between 'Wets' and 'drys,' but because it involves a problem of American government and of civil liberty, and I would like to see some sane and sensible way out of the present wilderness evolved. But to Mr. Wheeler everyone who is not with him is 'a tool of the liquor interests' or an 'enemy of society.'

"For a long time now we have been hearing about this or that person debating prohibition with Mr. Wheeler. I have, of course, no word of criticism for any one who wishes to do that, but personally I can see no possible object in debating with him unless it be to give publicity to him or to his opponent.

Hub's "Irish Jew" May Be Keystone of New Order

Boston may soon have an Irish-Jewish association similar to the one formed in New York. The nucleus is here in the person of at least one Irish Jew, namely Harry Sandler of Lucerne street, Dorchester.

Mr. Sandler, who left Ireland 14 years ago, and whose family still are Corkonians, said he would join an Irish-Jewish association at once if it were organized here.

TODAY

three times around the palace. That means a boy baby.

Some westerners will smile at all this "primitive stuff," but the sacred white obi and the purification by prayer is better than the old-fashioned American tight corset that often destroyed the new baby's chances.

The "obi" means many things in Japan, according to David Belasco. If a young lady, for instance, ties her "obi" in front, instead of tying it in the back, that means that she is no better than she should be.

At a wholesale fur auction in New York interest centered on muskrats and skunks. Those humble animals grow fur that lasts, and can be made to look like any fur you please. Two and one-quarter million dollars' worth of furs were sold in two days. One lot included 16,783 southern muskrat skins. Many swamps are going to waste that would produce good returns in "rat skins" which sell as high as $3 each. Ashley Grace was glad to get 25 cents apiece for those he caught at Fanwood, N. J., fifty years ago.

Skunk skins sold for $4.80 each, but they are harder to catch and handle.

Queen Marie is "almost poor." Think of a queen that hasn't even ONE MILLION.

The poor queen must keep up her palaces, pay her expensive staff, entertain friends, dress herself and her daughter on $30,000 a year. That is very little when you consider that she is the granddaughter of Queen Victoria and has a czar of Russia for a grandfather.

On her visit to America, she said to this writer: "If I were poor, I should open a dress-making shop. My daughter would be a good model."

What a fortune the two could make in this country. And how quickly.

MISS DRESSLER IN FILM CAST

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

LOS ANGELES, July 29.—There is cause for rejoicing. Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are to be re-united in "Bringing Up Father." All the thought waves expressing that desire must have reached Irving Thalberg. You just couldn't see "The Callahans and The Murphys" without registering a wish that these two comediennes play together again.

I told Marie Dressler, when I wished her bon voyage, she wouldn't stay in New York very long. I was right (strange to say). She will be back next week to play Mrs. Dinty Moore. Miss Moran draws Mrs. Jiggs. Jack Conway is slated to direct "Bringing Up Father," which all the world knows is based on George McManus' comic strip appearing in the Hearst papers. It is a Cosmopolitan picture.

THAT fiery, untamed young Mexican actress, Lupeta Velez, is having tests made for the role of the princess in "A Spanish Romance," David Wark Griffith's next picture.

There is talk that Velez, who is under contract to Hal Roach, will be kept on the United Artists' lot for the next Griffith picture, provided D. W. shares the enthusiasm of Velez's sponsors—who believe her dash and verve will create a sensation.

THE suddenness of June Mathis' passing was naturally a great shock to her husband, Sylvanio Balboni. Earlier in the day, Mr. Balboni had received an offer from Famous Players-Lasky for his wife's services as a scenario writer.

He sent her a message to telephone him long distance, and when the telephone rang he thought it was June.

DEPUTY REGISTRAR GIVEN PURSE OF GOLD

A purse of gold and a set of resolutions, framed, were presented today on the eve of his retirement, to Henry L. Pelkus, deputy chief assistant registrar in the City Election Department, by his co-workers. Pelkus will retire tomorrow after a service of twenty-seven years in the department. He will receive approximately half pay, or $1,500, as a pension.

Chief Registrar Thomas F. Mansfield made the purse presentation and Election Commissioner Patrick H. O'Connor that of the resolutions.

The retiring deputy is married and lives at No. 14 Castleton street, Jamaica Plain. One of his two sons attends M. I. T. and the other Tufts Medical School.

URGES ACTION ON MERCHANT MARINE

The speech of Governor Brewster of Maine before the Conference of Governors at Mackinac Island, Mich., in which the Maine executive made a stirring appeal for the development of the American Merchant Marine until it is second to none, continues to be the subject of discussion for citizens interested in America's commercial progress.

Even though Governor Brewster suggested the carrying of the mails as one form of subsidy for upbuilding the merchant marine, readers of his speech are making other suggestions for consideration.

Commander Thomas A. Kittinger, U. S. N., hydrographic officer for the North Atlantic District, says:

"Governor Brewster's speech, urging a bigger merchant marine, is to be commended. He tells us, however, how good we should be, but does not say in the statement published what we should or could do to make it so.

"In fact, so little constructive advice is offered the public that it has come to believe that there is some great mystery about the business of operating vessels and making them pay. There is not.

HAS TRADE MONOPOLY.

"Every nation that enjoys a prosperous mechant navy has done something to deserve it. England owns the greatest part of the exploitable earth and enjoys a more or less trade monopoly in the lands where the British flag flies.

"Italy protects her shipping by discriminatory laws. At present, Italian law requires that not less than fifty per cent. of Italian immigrants leaving Italy must depart on Italian flag ships. That insures a big trading advantage that allows her to reach out for more of the same kind of business in Middle Europe.

"It recently was reported in the American press that the Cunard Line received a subsidy from the British Government amounting to $9,000,000 for its ships flying the blue ensign of the British Naval Reserve.

PAY OWN NATIONALS.

"The underlying idea or most official aid to shipping is worked out through the particular needs from overseas coming to them in their own national bottoms. In other words they do their own transporting and pay their own nationals the freight.

"Suppose we took a leaf out of the book of the successful and followed their example. Suppose we said how much of our trade could be carried by foreign flag vessels; there would be a terrible gnashing of teeth from overseas, and, of course, it never could be.

"That is patent because right now the last three Presidents of the United States have not, for supposedly diplomatic reasons, issued the necessary executive order to put in operation the Jones Law, placing the Philippine Islands under the coastwise navigation provision.

"The American Merchant Marine needs more action and less talk.

JUDGE RAPS 4 AUTOISTS UNABLE TO PAY FINES

"I cannot quite comprehend how a man can drive an automobile and yet not be in a position to pay a nominal fine," declared Judge Devlin in Municipal Court today when four out of fifty automobile law violators came up for trial. All were fined $5.

Four declared they did not have the money, their plight causing the judge's remark. One asserted: "I am studying for the ministry, your honor, and I have the car for economical reasons." Judge Devlin suggested that travel by street car was more economical than gas and oil. The four moneyless ones were left high and dry in the dock until their S. O. S. messages were received by relatives and friends.

SAIL DOWN HARBOR ON NEW SHIP OF MERRIMAC FLEET

With a large party of guests aboard the motorship Merrimac, newest addition to the Merrimac Chemical fleet, today sailed on an inspection trip to the outer harbor, leaving Long Wharf this morning to return early in the evening.

The Merrimac was built as the steam trawler Gannett, being remodelled recently and later equipped with internal combustion engines and other modern equipment. She will be used by the company between Boston and New York for carrying their products.

KIRSTEIN IS PRESIDENT OF STORROW BOYS' HOME

With Louis E. Kirstein, vice-president of William Filene's Sons Company, as president, the West End House, founded and for many years supported by the late James J. Storrow as a boys' refuge, was incorporated today.

Papers of incorporation were issued by Secretary of State Cook on recommendation of Richard K. Conant, commissioner of public welfare. James J. Storrow, Jr., is named a director of the new corporation, to bek nown as the West End House, Inc.

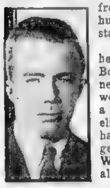
Low Price Boxing Should Go Across Kids Have Chance | Phil Ball Speaks Rough on Howley A. L. Needs Boss

By Nick Flatley

ARGONNE EXPERIMENT WILL BE INTERESTING

SERGEANT EDDIE MACK will try an interesting experiment when he puts on his popular-priced weekly shows at Braves Field. It's an idea that should appeal to followers of the tin ears and concave noses. Something of the sort has been attempted here before, but never quite on the pretentious scale outlined by the optimistic director of the Argonne club.

Fifty rounds of boxing in an evening for a price as low as fifty cents is a real sporting bargain. Boxing hasn't been frequent here this Summer and the fans are hungry for it. Eddie should get off to a good start, and that's all that's necessary.



Nick Flatley

He seems to have the right notion when he reaches around to the various corners of Boston and the State for talent. In this manner the local heroes get good tryouts, and the weekly show could very easily develop into a sort of perpetual championship contender elimination series. Many a good youngster has decided to go to work because he couldn't get a chance to box where it meant anything. With eight bouts per week on the program, all the worth-while boys can get a crack at it.

We do not pretend to urge the young of the land to take up mitt swinging. Any husky kid would be a lot better off if he found himself a real job and stuck to it. But with the youthful mind inflamed by tales of the million-dollar purses, there's a wild epidemic of boxing. The kids, temporarily, have decided to become Jack Dempseys rather than Babe Ruths.

Low-price boxing, outdoors, is really a new venture for Boston. It has been tried successfully indoors. The old Commercial club, with its small hall and its cheap cards, was a great money maker. It's time Serg. Eddie bumped into a good break for himself.

NEW YORK AND CHICAGO COULD SETTLE THE FIGHT ISSUE BY STAGING HALF THE BIG BOUT IN ONE CITY, AND THEN SHIFTING OVER TO THE OTHER WITH A DAY'S REST. THAT IDEA MIGHT WORK INTO TWO MILLION DOLLAR HOUSES IN THE SAME WEEK.

Mister Rickard's idea of charging radio fans for fight returns shows that the old boy still has the nerve that carried him through the wild western days. He doesn't need a gun now.

VERY ROUGH ON MANAGER DANIEL HOWLEY

DANIEL HOWLEY of Weymouth, here managing the St. Louis Browns, has a lot of sympathy coming his way. Dan's boss, Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis club, has just announced that he intended to sell his players and get himself a new outfit.

The scheme may be sound enough, but the announcement coming from Ball isn't giving Daniel any the best of it. Young Mister Howley is directing the club for his first year. It was a dispirited, shiftless crew when he took it over, and he has hardly had time to get his bearings. With his owner making wild speeches, Daniel can hardly hope to wield the iron fist of discipline very vigorously.

Modern ball players aren't natural hustlers, and they will never overwork if they're not driven to it. In a case where an owner steps over his manager's head, the athletes are very likely to take the "What-of-it?" attitude. That was the trouble with the Browns last year and Mister Ball's latest outburst is likely to cause a recurrence. Which is very rough on young Daniel Howley, who is a peppery individual and sure to infuse his own fire, given the proper time.

The Ball stuff is another evidence of the laxness that has crept into the American League. When Ban Johnson was czar, there were no public splits or undiplomatic utterances. What trouble there was was kept under cover and the league, to all appearances, was a smoothly functioning body.

Ban was tyrannical, but he had the proper viewpoint. The magnates would do well to get themselves a new president, and make him a real boss. The American League whirled to great success because of its efficiency. That valuable quality seems to be sliding out the last couple of years.

Two Nashua Players Fined by Davidson

Manager William Stewart of the Nashua Club of the New England Baseball League has been suspended and fined $50 for delaying the second game of the Nashua-Salem double-header at Salem last Wednesday, President Charles H. Davidson announced today. Outfielder Dresen of the Nashua club was fined $10 [illegible].

The game was forfeited to Salem by Umpire Sullivan as the result, President Davidson said, of "deliberate stalling" on the part of Manager Stewart and other Nashua players. At the time the game ended after three and one-half innings had been played, Salem was leading.

McPHAIL GOES DOWN IN GLORY

Former State Champion Is Victor in Thrilling Struggle at Worcester

New England championships. Semi-final rounds.

W. A. Whitcomb, Worcester, vs. Herbert Jaques, Country Club.

F. J. Wright, Jr., Albemarle, vs. A. M. Hoxie, Sandy Burr.

By BILL GRIMES

Worcester Country Club, Worcester, Mass., July 29.—After battling successfully through three rounds, Billy Whitcomb, a local boy, and Herbert Jaques of the Country Club in the upper half and Fred J. Wright, the former State champion of Albemarle and Burt Hoxie of Sandy Burr of the lower half are playing the semi-final rounds of the New England amateur championships this afternoon at the Worcester Country Club.

Fred Wright and [illegible] McPhail [illegible] As usual Wright [illegible] 20 holes.

[illegible]

WRIGHT DOWNS McPHAIL.

During the Wright-McPhail match four stymies were laid. On the 12th McPhail laid Wright a dead stymie and got a half, but Wright evened matters by reciprocating on the 15th when McPhail was all set to step in and win a hole.

[illegible]

McPhail tried to jump the stymie but he knocked Wright's ball in the hole, sending the match into extra holes and Fred came through with his fifth victory over his old time rival Billy McPhail.

Herbert Jaques [illegible] Whitcomb [illegible] Dave Whiteside of [illegible] 4 and 3.

But Hoxie and [illegible] outward holes, but after Hoxie squared [illegible] the Sandy Burr player came to and breezed in a 4 and 3 winner.

HALVED FIRST HOLE.

Going to the first [illegible] Whiteside was over with his second with Whitcomb in the trap and the hole was halved with [illegible] Whitcomb [illegible] the third with a 4 [illegible] and he took two putts for a 5 while Whitcomb, home in two, was down for a four.

Whiteside played a beautiful shot to the fourth after Whitcomb had dropped his tee shot in the trap, his ball being only ten feet from the cup. The Worcester player exploded cleverly, but was short and failed to get down in one putt. Whiteside missed his [illegible] but won the hole with a three, squaring the match.

Whiteside was home with a drive and a mashie at the 5th. He put his tee shots so close to the brook that he was forced to play his second with his left foot in the brook but a great shot got him home and he won the hole for Whitcomb was short with his second and failed to put his approach dead.

Whitcomb dropped back to two down when he took a five on the short 6th, to Whiteside's 3, but right here he started a drive which won him three consecutive holes putting him one up at the turn.

WHITESIDE IS TRAPPED.

Whiteside was trapped with his second at the 7th, with Whitcomb home, and he lost to a fine four. Going to the short 8th, Whiteside pulled his tee shot to the road and the ball was directly behind a rock. He was unable to reach the green with his second and Whitcomb, who was trapped from the tee, won the hole with a four.

Whiteside got another bad break

'I Drank for Alexander' Is Flint Rhem's Alibi

Add famous last words:

"I took Alexander's drinks and drank them. I wanted to protect him from the attentions of his friends."

Thus does the South pay it's debt of honor. Thus does the chivalry of old time Carolina make itself felt in a modern setting.

Flint Rhem is out $2,000 and may quit baseball. But he has an alibi that ought to sell for big money in any fiction market.

Accused of drinking to excess in Philadelphia during the Cardinal visit there, Mr. Rhem of the Carolina Rhems, admitted the truth of the accusation. He had looked upon the wine when it was red, he said. Also, upon the corn liquor when it was white, and upon the moonshine when it was clear as crystal.

But in a good cause.

"The fans were treating Alexander," he explained, "and how! I wanted to protect Alex. I hate to see an old fellow taking too much. So I drank my own drinks and then drank Alex's. I couldn't bear to see him potted."

Unfortunately Sam Breadon, owner of the St. Louis club, has [illegible] alibi fell on deaf ears. The $2,000 fine stands. [illegible] Rhem's sacrifice has been in vain.

TO DECIDE ON VOIGT SOON

Washington, July 29 (I.N.S.)—A decision will be handed down next week by the United States Golf Association on the amateur standing of George J. Voigt, the Middle Atlantic's leading golfer, who has been barred from further amateur tournaments by the District of Columbia Golf Association.

Herbert H. Ramsay, secretary of the U. S. G. A., who conducted an all-day investigation into charges against Voigt, was in New York today studying the information he collected here.

Voigt told Ramsay that he had violated none of the amateur rules and had violated none of the amateur rules and had received no money, directly or indirectly, for playing golf. He declared he was employed by Edward B. McLean, newspaper publisher, but contended that his employment had no bearing on his golf.

A number of prominent Washington golfers came to Voigt's defense.

Whether Voigt can play in the national amateur tourney in Minneapolis depends upon the decision by Ramsay.

AMATEURS TO BATTLE AUGUST 8 AT GARDEN

Red Sox, Now Stepping Out, Tackle St. Louis Browns Today

The old days are on the way back. Bill Carrigan seems to have his magic working at the Fenway. His club looked like a real ball team, grabbing both ends of a double-header from the Cleveland Indians, and the fans are all popping off.

It's so long since a Sox team won two good games on one and the same day that it's almost front page news. It [illegible] club [illegible] to believe in itself. That spirit has to be [illegible].

Dan Howley brings his St. Louis Browns in today for four [illegible] of baseball [illegible] games [illegible] Tuesday [illegible] Monday.

There has been [illegible] the Carrigans have been [illegible] looked [illegible] good winning three out of four from the Indians.

Boston Boosters Pin Kayo on Croakers

By Jack Conway

"A CITY is no greater than the dreams of its leading citizens," said Mr. Boston today as he mopped the perspiration from his brow. "I just came in from Allerton," continued the veteran. "And as I was hot I went in for a swim. When I got tired of swimming I passed away a pleasant half hour floating.

"One only can see the sky and the ripple of the waves as he [illegible]. It gives one a lot of time to think.

"It was [illegible] that I should think of Boston as it is my native city and I like to see it grow and prosper. I have always [illegible] that Boston is the greatest city in the world and that it can [illegible] over anything that they can in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles or any place else.

"Boston, unfortunately, has a rather large number of croakers and knockers who are so short sighted that they cannot see their own city doing anything worth while. They honestly believe because they themselves do things in a very small way that the great and glorious city of Boston must also do things in a small way.

"I am glad to report that this group is [illegible] and that its influence is becoming less each year. There are enough citizens with real vision and courage to enable Boston to compete in sports with the leading cities in the United States.

Mr. Boston

"I CAN remember when the same class of wisecrackers and know it alls used to refer to Philadelphia as a 50 cent fight town because that is the largest figure they can juggle in their own minds without getting a headache.

"Tex Rickard, master mind of the boxing racket, decided that Philadelphia was as good a fight town as New York or any place else, so he [illegible]. That fight was a show that drew $1,500,000. This is the biggest amount of money a town ever drew anywhere. Pretty good, I think, for a 50 cent fight town.

"Some of the wise birds thought the good citizens of Philadelphia and the State of Pennsylvania would never stand for a soak of $27.50 for ringside seats. On the day of the show I saw people fighting for the privilege of paying $[illegible] for tickets down front.

"If you give the public a high class attraction they will pay the overhead, but they won't pay a dime for a cheap attraction.

"I HAVE seen thousands of people from Boston pay $27.50 for fight tickets at New York shows. All [illegible] costs them $100 each to take in a bout in New York.

"An example of how Boston would support a big show was shown at the office of the Suffolk A. A. the other day when Matchmaker Tom Goodwin wired Jack Dempsey an offer of $300,000 to fight Jack Sharkey here. One fan, whom I afterwards found out was George Crafty of West Roxbury, stepped up to the box office window and asked that ten seats be reserved in his name.

"'I want ringside seats and I don't care how much they cost as long as they are down front,' said Crafty.

"Many other similar orders were received.

"I have heard many of the members of the Croakers Union wonder why Tom Goodwin has been such a big success as a matchmaker. The answer is simple. He has vision and can see things in a big way.

"WHEN Goodwin took a buggy ride in from Quincy and started promoting boxing in Boston, a $5,000 [illegible] town talking for a week. Goodwin knocked some of the [illegible] when he started paying $5,000 guarantees to boxers. He [illegible] gasp when he began to draw $15,000 to $50,000 [illegible].

"Goodwin now has an idea that Boston is [illegible] million dollar shows. And I'm enough of an optimist to [illegible]. There's no reason why Boston should remain a [illegible] or in anything else. The city will be just as big as its [illegible].

"I believe there are enough sport leaders w[illegible] courage to offset the boobs with the 50 cent minds.

"If you cannot be a booster for Boston, remain quiet. Otherwise you will be only a detriment to your city and an [illegible]."

Miss Wills followed up her advantage by winning the fifth and sixth game. The sixth game [illegible] the brand of tennis that has made her name a byword wherever the game is played.

Miss Jacobs was bewildered. The champion uncovered a barrage of shots some of which veteran tennis followers have not seen displayed in years. The match was within her grasp and she was anxious to end the contest as soon as possible. Miss Jacobs returned her service in brilliant manner only to find herself out of position for a return shot.

MISS JACOBS WINS 7TH.

Miss Jacobs won the seventh game [illegible] series of brilliant [illegible] to the net when Miss Wills sent up a lob to score a kill. This she did on two occasions and perhaps would have continued on but for a change of tactics by the champion.

One beautiful placement along the sideline and a fast return down the center of the court gave her a 4 to 3 victory.

Though she rallied to prolong the match in the eighth game, placing so as to force the [illegible] on two points, she lacked the necessary technique to [illegible] finish her aim and found Miss Wills winning the eighth game and match.

The play today brought out the championship calibre of Miss Wills. Playing steady tennis at a time when the average player would have blown up, the girl that startled Europe only three weeks ago apparently proved to those watching the match that she is "nerveless" under fire. Her game varied little during the whole engagement. She mixed her shots well, took advantage of every opportunity to score and this coupled with her terrific service caused the defeat of her opponent.

Miss Jacobs on the other hand was erratic at times. Her service considered [illegible] to bother Miss W[illegible]

Dutch Henry Is Slowest of All

Chicago, July 29 (I N S).—Dutch Henry, pitcher of the New York Giants, had qualified today as baseball's slowest base runner. In the game with the Cubs yesterday he was unable to score from third on a single.

With Henry on third, Mann singled to left. Taking it for granted that no play could be made on him, Henry ambled to the plate and was tagged out amid the jeers of the fans when Left Fielder Stephenson unexpectedly threw to the plate.

Summer Care of the Hands

By Maria Jeritza,

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

IF CARE [illegible]

[illegible] Summer as Winter. But the Summer [illegible] may be slightly more bleaching and less greasy than the one [illegible] use in cold weather.

I do not know of a better Summer lotion for the hands than the following formula, which you can easily make up at home.

Tincture of benzoin, three drams; tragacanth shavings, sixty grains; glycerin, half ounce; water, one pint.

Boil these ingredients, stirring them constantly until they are dissolved. Add a little water to allow for evaporation.

The formula should result in a clear thin jelly. If it is too thick, put in a little more water. If you wish, add a few drops of perfume.

Keep the jelly in a covered glass or china jar in a cool place. In order to be sure that the tragacanth is in pure form it's well to buy it in chips, or shavings, rather than powdered.

Borax and [illegible] makes the lotion slightly bleaching—a safeguard against sunburn and freckles. If freckles are a serious problem to you in your care of your hands, try the following mixture as a bleach:

Grated horseradish, 1 ounce; powdered borax, 3 drams; warm water, 1 gill.

Dip absorbent cotton in this mixture and sponge the freckles from time to time, then after a few minutes sponge it off with cold water. This [illegible] can safely be applied several times daily.

Just a little faithful care each day will make for your hands the [illegible] and dainty grooming that mark them as the hands of a well bred woman.

Are Your Hands Always Restless?

"What [illegible] the fatigue [illegible] you so I don't know. But after an [illegible] with her I'm simply dead!"

[illegible] And I found out why [illegible] exquisitely suited and cared for [illegible] never [illegible] for an instant.

When [illegible]

As [illegible] first weary the eye [illegible] And when [illegible] is fingering her waist [illegible] or her rings or her beads. Or pressing little creases into her gown.

And it occurs to me now that this woman is not entirely unique in our [illegible] mannerism.

American hands are, I suppose, the most nervous hands in the world. They come nearest to expressing perpetual motion of any other created thing excepting the American [illegible].

And what a lot of energy they waste. Energy the whole body requires for proper functioning.

It is easy to learn to cultivate repose of the hands. Drop them in the lap, palms up, for five minutes and see how restful it is. Restful to yourself and to those you talk to.

Try, at any rate, to prevent the activity of your hands marring your own personality as hers do that of the charming woman.

Violet Ray Treatment

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,

Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU naturally have read about the great value of the ultra violet rays. You doubtless have heard of the treatment of many cases of disease by these rays through exposure to the sunlight. You may have even been approached to buy an apparatus that imparts the violet quality to rays that emanate from it.

Well, violet rays are valuable. Exposure to them in the sunlight does help to cure many conditions and many of the machines for their generation are of great value—but remember all of them have their limitations as some [illegible] essential [illegible]

This [illegible] New York State Journal of Medicine [illegible]

[illegible] not work. It [illegible] convert foods, such as oil, vegetables and dried milk, into substances actively opposed to rickets. It also [illegible] for which nothing else would be of any use but an operation.

Many physicians have reported a general tonic effect from its use in rickets. The general condition of the child is improved and the appetite stimulated. He sleeps better and is more vigorous. Sometimes, however, the child remains quite unaffected, and so far the clinical and laboratory experts have failed to distinguish between those children who will benefit by the treatment and those who will not be improved. It must be determined by trial which, however, is always safe. In general brunettes seem to be improved more than blondes, but the marked difference in the result is probably due more to a difference in the symptoms than in the types of the patients.

The ultra-violet rays are being employed largely to prevent the development of colds, or so-called "grippe" infection. Some children, even healthy and vigorous ones, are subject to frequent catarrhal infections throughout the Winter. A test carried out at the Home for Hebrew Infants on fifty young children showed [illegible] did not decrease the [illegible] of these infections, nor [illegible] prevent the [illegible] of whooping cough or chicken pox.

For skin diseases also, ultra violet light is used extensively. It is of great value when combined with surgery in curing boils, but on the [illegible] when it has been unsatisfactory for [illegible]

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

CHAPTER XXXIX.

QUITE early in the morning Jill started out to look Gladys up before she went on to business. Gladys herself opened the door.

"Oh, Jill," she gasped. "How kind of you to come! I—I thought if you knew—you wouldn't want to have anything to do with me again."

"Fiddlesticks!" said Jill briskly. "I don't know what you're talking about. What have you done, I'd like to know?" She came in and shut the door. "Been left on the mat by a man you loved and trusted. Who's to blame? Not you, darling. It's a nasty habit they've got, some of them, and because they can't be punished for it, they simply don't care. But you! Oh, poor kid! You've been ill."

Big tears welled up into Gladys's eyes. She wiped them away.

"I'm better now," she said. "Only I was so miserable and worried. You see, I [illegible] word I wasn't [illegible]. We [illegible] have [illegible] One day he walked out—and never came [illegible]."

Jill put her arm round the thin [illegible]. There wasn't very much of Gladeyes left these days.

"Tell me all about it, Gladys," she said.

They sat close together holding hands. [illegible] Gladys was longing to tell her story. How she [illegible] Jill after all. She was [illegible] and [illegible] sister, and [illegible] in the [illegible].

[illegible] "I—I [illegible]—I had to."

Jill nodded comprehensively.

"You were in love," she said. "All in. You simply had to obey your nature. Nature wasn't wrong—only the man. That's where you came the big cropper, pet."

Gladys nodded.

"I—I don't think I loved him, Jill," she said hesitantly. "I only mistook it for love. I was flattered and he had a way of making me feel—I can't quite explain. When I was with him I simply wanted to do whatever he wished. He could [illegible] so easily."

"Of course," said Jill. "You were wax in his hands. How soon did you find out he was—no good?"

"Not until I left you. I thought he was a—very honorable man. You're not laughing at me, Jill, are you?"

"Do I look like laughing?" answered Jill. "I'd like to have that gentleman in front of me now. Oh [illegible]! He knew you were a baby! He knew you were simply an untried little girl! Anyone who met you or talked to you [illegible] see that. He couldn't have thought anything else. Is he [illegible]?"

Gladys shook her head.

"No [illegible] But [illegible] in society [illegible] very [illegible] when he marries it must be some one who [illegible] as his wife and entertain people and do him credit."

"[illegible] so."

"Yes—afterwards . . . when I was crying and upset because he wasn't going to keep his word. He put it very [illegible] as he could. He explained that if he married me it would be social suicide for him."

"[illegible] What of suicide [illegible] Didn't he think of that? Hadn't he anything to say?"

"Were You in England All The Time?" Asked Jill

"Oh, yes. He talked and argued with me until everything seemed quite right. He didn't believe that I was—a good girl, Jill, because I was on the stage. . . . He said I couldn't be as innocent as I pretended. Oh, Jill! I was so desperate I nearly came back to you! That was the day after. . . ."

"Why didn't you? Oh, why didn't you?" demanded Jill almost fiercely.

"Because I had gone too far. . . . And he was still very kind. He said it was silly to take it to heart, and I could be quite happy if only I didn't fret and worry. So I tried to cheer up, to please him. I—I thought he might change his mind a little later on, perhaps, and—and put things right after all. That's why I didn't write to you. I—didn't know what to say. I couldn't tell you stories. Besides, you'd have guessed, you're so quick."

"Were you in England all the time?" asked Jill.

"We went to Paris for a fortnight." She hung her head. "It was only a fortnight altogether, Jill. . . . Then we came back and he took some rooms for a week in Clarges street. He began to change then, and on the Saturday he told me to go out and do some shopping. He gave me fifty pounds to spend, and I was away about an hour. When I came back there was no sign of him, and he'd taken his boxes, Jill—and gone. Gone, without a word. I felt like dying! It was such a terrible shock, because I never dreamt he would steal away and desert me. He'd paid the bill, of course.

"I had about thirty out of the fifty pounds he had given me that morning left, as well as the wrist bracelet. That paid for my illness afterwards, when I had brain fever. When I got better I tried to find him, but he must have given me a wrong name at the club he belongs to, because the letters were all returned 'not known.' It isn't easy to trace a person who doesn't mean to be found, and now it's weeks since he left me alone. I've got over the unhappiness. I wouldn't marry him now.

"I'm hopeless because I can't get back on the stage. I want to work, and I don't stand a chance."

"You'll stand a chance when you've picked up," said Jill. "You're not as pretty, Gladeyes. There's no difference except that you're Sadder now, and that's got to be altered soon. How are you off for money, pet?"

Gladys hesitated.

"Oh, I've paid the rent up till last week," she answered evasively, "and it costs me ever so little to live. Cocoa's so filling and I drink a lot of tea."

"Yes, darling," agreed Jill. "Cocoa's quite [illegible] only I'm not talking about food values. How much cash have you actually got?"

"Not much now." The confession came reluctantly. "I've just got to the end of everything. That's why I was so desperate—last night. I [illegible]. It seemed so awful [illegible]."

Jill opened her purse. As soon as [illegible] she was going to [illegible] it away.

"Now [illegible]," Jill [illegible] "here's twenty pounds. You've got to have it. I'm [illegible] off, and you're not to [illegible] because I haven't time to argue. I shall be late in Bond street as it is. And when that's gone you must have some more."

"But [illegible] I can't! Aren't they your savings?"

Gladeyes was Incurably Romantic at Heart

"Yes, but I shan't need them," Jill replied. "Can you keep a secret, Gladeyes? All right then. No one's to know. I'm going to be married the day after tomorrow, by special license, to Sir Frank Carter, and so far as money goes I shall be rich. He's toffee in all flavors, you know, [illegible] And he's done me the honor to offer me his hand and his heart—both rather flabby, I should imagine."

"Oh, Jill! How splendid of you! [illegible] seem pleased. Is he [illegible] ugly? Or can't you like [illegible]?"

"He's not old," Jill answered, "or [illegible] . . . He doesn't [illegible] to me, that's all. I'll tell you why I'm marrying him, as we're telling each other our secrets today. You know Eddie's in a hole? [illegible] Well, he [illegible] her was afraid he was going to jump into the river. Perhaps he [illegible] If he didn't meet you there, I think he might have. Anyway, in the meantime, while he was getting cold and wet on the embankment, I had borrowed two thousand pounds for Eddie from Sir Frank Carter, who stumped up on condition that I married him. Never let Eddie know this, or he'd be upset. It's my funeral, no one else's. Most people, especially mother, would say I was a very lucky girl. Anyway, it's enabled Eddie to square up, and that's a very good thing. Don't you bother your head about me, Gladeyes dear, or you'll go and get brain fever again. What did you say?"

In spite of her own unhappy experience, Gladys was incurably romantic at heart.

"I was only wishing you could be really fond of him," she said. "Can't you [illegible]?"

Jill looked [illegible] herself.

"No," she answered [illegible] tion. "A person can try to do all sorts of difficult things and succeed simply through will power, but love isn't one of them. It's got to come naturally or not at all. You can't force it like rhubarb. I should never love my toffee-in-all-flavors if I tried till I was old and grey, so I'm not going to attempt it."

"And yet you're going through with it! Oh, Jill! What a sacrifice—even for Eddie! Isn't it a pity? And it's—for life! Aren't you unhappy?"

Jill shook her head. "Not now," she answered.

"I worried badly for about two hours when I first woke up this morning, somewhere about 3 a. m., and realized what I had done and what was going to happen. I imagined waking up in two mornings' time and finding myself not alone any more, but married and absolutely done for—Lady Carter, in all flavors, but chiefly bitter. . . . And then I thought of the man who kissed me once and turned my whole world upside down—the one man I can't forget—or have. I felt ghastly, Gladeyes! Cracked heart and cold feet mixed. I couldn't stand it any longer. I got out of bed and I prayed with all my might for something to happen to let me out. . . . I can't break my promise because it wouldn't be cricket; but if anything happened to make toffee-in-all-flavors change his mind at the eleventh hour, then I should be honorably free. Do you see?"

"Yes [illegible] in the [illegible]"

"Not so far as you or I can tell," Jill replied.

Gladys [illegible] and [illegible] "[illegible] off for a [illegible]"

Jill smiled.

[illegible] the good of crying over [illegible] has got to be spilt? Even if I do have to go like a lamb to the sacrifice, I shall put the best face on it I can."

"But you'll never enjoy life again!"

"Oh, shan't I?" answered Jill. "There are all sorts of antidotes for a [illegible] heart, and the best of them [illegible] getting busy. I shall do a lot of good in all kinds of ways [illegible]—once I can get the [illegible] At present [illegible] I [illegible] on their [illegible] I [illegible] him stamp [illegible] actresses and starving kiddies [illegible] really [illegible] And I shall give [illegible] tons of [illegible] and [illegible] kiddies with an [illegible] She made a face. "I wonder what he'd say [illegible] if he could hear me now."

"I Hate Wearing My Heart on My Sleeve"

"You're only talking a lot to cover up what you really feel," said Gladys astutely.

For a moment Jill dropped the mask.

"[illegible] I hate wearing my heart on my sleeve [illegible] Gladeyes, or [illegible] keep it [illegible] with you [illegible] turned down—Eddie [illegible] especially—[illegible] and [illegible] I'm [illegible] I can."

Gladys had [illegible] her cheek against Jill's. She felt something warm and moist trickle down. Jill was crying—self-contained Jill, who she had never known to shed a tear.

"Oh, Jill!" she murmured. "And you do so deserve to be happy. More than anyone I know."

Jill fished for her [illegible] and mopped her eyes [illegible] the [illegible] cracks [illegible] her [illegible] optimistic [illegible] curve once more.

"In the world," [illegible] observed with a swift recurrence of cheerfulness, "I've noticed that people invariably get what they deserve, so [illegible] there's still [illegible] hope for me!"

Flies . . mosquitoes . . roaches

They breathe it—and stop breathing. That is the way Black Flag kills insects. It strangles them. It misses no fly or mosquito in a room—they all die.

Black Flag completely rids a home of roaches, fleas, ants, moths and bed-bugs. It contains a secret, vegetable ingredient which is the deadliest bug killer ever discovered. But it is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

The use of Black Flag will keep your home entirely free from insect invasions. Two forms—Liquid and Powder. Buy the one you prefer—they are equally deadly to bugs. At drug, grocery, hardware and department stores. Powder 15c up.

BOOK REVIEW
Excerpts From "Maurine," Fear Provoking Romance of 1901.

Helen's rippling laughter floated through the room, and dear, sweet, lovely Maurine LaPelle wilted like a cafeteria salad at four in the afternoon—

"Under the dark and swiftly gathing gloom
Of Vivian's questioning, accusing eyes
That searched her soul. She almost shrieked beneath
That stern, fixed gaze; and stood spellbound until
He turned with sudden movement, gave his hand
To catch in turn, and said, 'You must not stand
Longer young ladies, in this open door.
The air is heavy with a cold, damp chill.
We shall have rain tomorrow, or before.
Good night.'"

He vanished in the darkling shade—with a flash of his gold tooth—and so the dreaded evening found an end that saw Maurine strike her blow for honor and for friend.

We shall now have twenty-four hours intermission, during which everyone is urged to have a good cry.

DON'T GO NEAR THE BARROOM

Don't go near the barroom, brother, listen to a sister's prayer;
Do not yield to its temptation—sin and death are lurking there.
Do not heed the gilded palace, 'tis a mask the tempter wears,
For deep destruction lurks beneath it, and will meet you unawares.

CHORUS

Dearest brother, you will never break the demon's tightening chain
Unless you make a grand endeavor to be free from it again.

Don't go near the barroom, brother; touch not, taste not of the wine.
There is poison in its contact, do not worship at the shrine.
Join the happy temperance army, spurn the barroom and the cup.
Then strong in love we'll work together, till the demon shall give up.

THE WOMAN HE LOVED
By Eudora Ramsay Richardson

GEORGE HARWOOD [illegible] his wife across the morning paper and felt that [illegible] been something [illegible] postmaster at a second class office [illegible] Bessie had [illegible] Brent Taliaferro [illegible] Brent Taliaferro' [illegible] to stop thinking of her.

"How [illegible] clothes and [illegible] Elks convention next week," he [illegible]

I wish you would [illegible] Bessie [illegible] boy [illegible] and [illegible] the children. You go, of course."

George threw his [illegible] on the [illegible] the living room [illegible] Brent Taliaferro [illegible] summer baby. The flowers in Bessie's prim beds bore little kinship to the blooms that drooped about the orchid bowl. Oatmeal and prunes made flesh and blood children perhaps, bone meal and sheep manure made healthy plants, but not the soft [illegible] Brent would create [illegible] have had Brent Taliaferro [illegible] chosen Bessie [illegible] qualities that were [illegible] Six years ago [illegible] without Bess [illegible] for her.

"If you stay here [illegible] can't wait."

Depending on Brent, going when her opportunity, and [illegible] had come! He loved her, but he must make her accept his terms.

"Later, sweetheart," he had said. "Give up the offer. Marry me now. I'm not going to be content here, I promise you that."

Brent had [illegible] against his [illegible] her arms [illegible] his neck.

"I'm afraid, George," she had whispered. "I'm afraid."

[illegible] she would not have him.

But the next morning she had gone. [illegible] promptly. "When you are [illegible]," she [illegible] written, "you will find me in New York, working to make of myself something different from a small town wife."

That afternoon George had met Bessie [illegible] at the [illegible] Bessie was certainly not the sort to send the blood tingling through a boy's veins. Yet [illegible] would all be [illegible] Six years had been spent in the same [illegible] cottage. Now this magazine cover embodied the spirit of the girl he loved—intangible, unconventional, elusive—all that Bessie and her stolid children could never be.

The Elks' convention came to an end on Saturday night. Dutifully George stayed through it all. On Sunday morning, however, he left for New York.

Brent Taliaferro was in the telephone book. Her voice over the wire had the same [illegible] quality he remembered—a little fuller, perhaps, but [illegible] Brent's.

[illegible] George [illegible] at last," she [illegible] "Come to tea this afternoon [illegible] I want to talk to you [illegible]"

George found Brent's apartment on the top floor of a red brick house off Washington square. She met him at the door and drew him into her studio living room. She [illegible] a mass of [illegible] promise of six years ago.

"We're to have supper together [illegible]" Brent said. "There's to be a studio party [illegible] but now I want to hear you tell me everything."

"[illegible] Brent, there isn't any [illegible] I'm still plodding and I'm [illegible] Bessie's all right and [illegible] me for that soft of thing."

Brent narrowed her almond shaped eyes as she looked at George.

"But didn't you know me rather well before you married Bessie?" she asked.

"Yes, but I didn't know myself."

George was by her side in a second, his arms around her.

"I'll chuck everything and stay," he declared. "I'll begin at the bottom and show you that the post office hasn't gotten the stuff you said I had in me. You do still love me, Brent?"

"Oh, I do love you," Brent faltered. "It's ghastly that I should, but I do. Everything is so final with me."

Six years were crumbling away like a shattered coat of mail that had been [illegible] his spirit. He could show Brent that his powers had not altogether atrophied.

By the flickering glow of logs burning in an old fireplace they had supper on a queer little [illegible] for two—[illegible] better than Bessie's Sunday night [illegible] and scrambled eggs. Then the guests began to arrive—an assortment different from anything George had ever seen—artists with unkempt hair and [illegible] a Russian who talked of Freedom and American [illegible], writers who [illegible] and the [illegible] a [illegible] evidently [illegible] money, a university professor who hated the [illegible] of youth, an Irish newspaper man who boasted two jail terms and a near execution. The air was dense with words incomprehensible to George, thick with smoke. Brent was the center of it all.

George was [illegible] and alone. Brent seemed as [illegible] as the stars. These people [illegible] to talk to him; but George [illegible] from which [illegible] Postmaster, superintendent of [illegible] Sunday School, Bessie's [illegible] father of two [illegible] it all and [illegible] he had no [illegible] to talk to [illegible] He knew that [illegible] him back. He [illegible]

[illegible] homesickness for the [illegible] through him for Bessie's [illegible] unquestioning [illegible] for the every [illegible] in which he could take part. Then looking at Brent, he knew [illegible] her as one [illegible] unattainable; [illegible] for making the things he could do seem hollow and trifling.

Like a thief George slipped out of the apartment and was gone. He would take the midnight train for home. Bessie was the woman he [illegible] the woman that it was right that he should have married. With his dreams Brent would remain fixed in the high heavens. With Bessie he would continue to live on the lower plane of a small town. Life with Bessie would go on being effortless—easy—and ease was a thing not to be lightly cast aside. But the woman he loved—the man he had wanted to be—if he could only forget!

THE WITTY SAYINGS OF MEDBURY

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

THOUSANDS of women have become discouraged lately. They claim that the modern men are too shy. One girl says her sweetheart is getting so bashful that he's beginning to ask for his kisses.

HE'S the kind of a fellow who takes "No" for an answer.

HE USED to be a live-wire but somebody turned his power off.

HE called on her the other evening and brought his own chaperone.

WHEN she mentioned that her hands were cold he told her to clap them.

HE could be in the back seat of a Ford and the flivver would still be empty.

HE'S so dumb he'll probably take a lot of mistletoe on his honeymoon.

OF course he hasn't had much experience. He even whispers in a speak-easy.

HE thinks the swan dive is a night club.

HE was out motoring with a girl the other evening and kept both hands on the wheel.

HE didn't know any better. He must have thought she went along for the ride.

SHE put her arm around him and his face got so red it looked like a stop-light.

SHE said, "Listen, honey, I wanna pet." So he drove over to a kennel and bought her a bull dog.

HE was too good to be true. He was under the impression that necking had something to do with goiters.

HE'S so anxious to become engaged to her that he can hardly wait for leap year.

HE wanted her to sit on his lap but she hadn't asked him.

HE'S the sort of a man who's so proper that he always wears a tuxedo when he sends a night letter to a lady.

IT'S foolish to be reticent in this day and age, because most girls are brought up in a cafeteria country where men are men and college boys help themselves.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

A MORN the air is filled with song, a myriad silver notes on dawn's fresh wind are borne along from countless joyous throats. Such melody as tells a tale of bliss untouched by care, of wells of joy that never fail, is launched upon the air. All through the golden Summer day, to match the swift wings' flights, liquid and clear, serene and gay, song soars to happy heights, and every note that upward drifts, wrought all of pure delight, some burden from man's spirit lifts and makes some hour more bright. But all who love the feathered clan know rarest madrigals to greet the eager ear of man are heard when twilight falls. For fearless of the coming night, with notes as sweet as musk, he lends us courage and delight, the bird that sings at dusk.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for "Best Joke" published. Address "Best Joke," Boston Evening American.

A young lawyer, pleading his first case, had been retained by a farmer to prosecute a railway company for killing 24 hogs. He wanted to impress the jury with the magnitude of the injury.

"Twenty-four hogs, gentlemen. Twenty-four. Twice the number there is in the jury box.

MATTHEW D'INDREA,

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS---

By HELEN ROWLAND

VERILY, verily, my Daughter, absence maketh the heart grow fonder, but PROPINQUITY is love's acid test!

And the man that loveth ONE WOMAN, from the wedding day to the grave, without variation and without doubt, is written down by the Recording Angel as Winner of the Heart's Endurance Contest.

Go to. Wherefore doth a man take great credit to himself for his life-long devotion to a dead and departed wife? Wherefore doth he pin medals upon himself for his undying passion for a woman who hath married another man and is therefore unattainable?

For it is EASY to be faithful in spirit to One whose voice is but a memory and whose claims do not get upon the nerves or hamper the feet or cramp the pocket-book.

Yet were she near at hand to face him across the coffee percolator each morning, would he love this same woman with the same unaltering devotion?

Yea, would he continue to adore her without fluctuation, were she forever at his heels, urging him to take his tonic and to wear his overshoes and to keep his feet off the furniture, and to be home in time for dinner?

Would his fondness for her be as glowing and unwavering, were she always there to question him as to where he had BEEN and where he was GOING?

And to ask him what he had DONE with all his money and WHY he could never find anything around the house?

And WHEN he was going to mend the screen door?

And IF he loved her as much as ever?

And WHY he didn't get his hair cut?

Go to. Could he love her as passionately in a bungalow apron and curling kids as in a fluffy evening gown, after a beauty treatment?

Could he love her as unswervingly when the steak was burned and the muffins had fallen and her locks were out of curl, as in his dreams?

Nay, verily! For the love of an unattainable Ideal is human, and the love of the dead and departed is divine.

But the love of a Human Being, beside whom thou dwellest within four walls, is SUPERHUMAN!

Radio Dialog

By C. WILLIAM RADOS

WE were present recently at a meeting of the local amateur radio society. These men and women are experts in transmitting code and telephone all over the world. They sit in nightly communication with Brazil, Austria, New Zealand, and the North Pole.

* * *

We saw the equipment with which one Newton amateur does his marvelous communication. He had two small panels covered with meters, dials, lamps, and all kinds of electrical equipment. He did not show us the receipts so we don't know where he got it, but then some of the broadcasting stations will not either.

* * *

A small, three tube receiver allows him to listen to signals from all over the world. One night he talked to a British amateur who sent his wife visiting in America. Would the American in Newton kindly deliver the message?

* * *

Would the Newton American deliver the message to a good looking wife whose husband was 3000 miles away? This was a reflection upon the courage of the American. Most Americans would not wait until the husband was around the corner.

Such are the marvels of amateur radio.

CHEER LITTLE SHUT-INS

IN RAY GRIFFITH'S "TIME TO LOVE"
Vera Voronina and Alfred Sabato, who appear with Raymond Griffith in "Time to Love" are favorites with the shut-ins at the Boston Sanatorium. By arrangement of the Boston Evening American and Metropolitan Theatre the film was shown at the Mattapan institution.

LITTLE CRIPPLES TO SEE "HIGH HAT" RAY'S FILM

Raymond Griffith can have anything he wants out at the Boston Sanatorium, in Mattapan, where his newest comedy was given a great reception.

"Time to Love," casting "High Hat" Ray as a disillusioned young sweetheart, might just as well be called "Time to Laugh," for the 200 odd children suffering from tubercular ailments, as well as the many adults at the sanitorium, had a merry time.

There were laughs aplenty at this latest picture to be presented by the Boston Evening American and the Metropolitan Theatre as the twelfth of a series of similar entertainments shown at hospitals.

This afternoon another big treat will be given when the little tots at the State Hospital for Crippled Children see the picture. Doctors at that institution, like the medical officers elsewhere, say there is no better medium to dispel worry and pain than movie entertainments, and with this idea in view, the Boston Evening American will continue to sponsor hospital motion pictures in the future.

The idea has met with commendation from every quarter, the heartiest praise of all coming from the patients and their relatives.

THIEF RUN DOWN BY DEATH

Wilmington, N. C., July 29 (A.P.).—Death claimed G. Greenler, charged with embezzlement of $10,000 government funds while a coast guard paymaster at New York before government agents could overtake and arrest him.

The body of Greenler was found on a highway near Goldsboro and although several capsules were found nearby physicians had not yet determined the cause of his death. Greenler was 35 years old and a native of Cambridge, Mass.

Federal authorities in this section were said to have been searching for the man after they had been informed he was in the region.

IRISH CAMP IS ATTACKED

Dublin, July 29 (A.P.).—Armed men made an attack on the guard at the Tallaght military camp, near Dublin, today, but were driven off by the soldiers' fire. None of the guard was injured.

Between 50 and 60 shots were exchanged.

The morning was dark and the military authorities were unable to say whether any of the attackers, who retreated across a field, were wounded.

Delightful apartments of every description and every location are offered for rent in the Boston American Classified Ads every day. Classifications 96 and 97.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON JULY 29, 1927

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Wheelerism's Defense

It Avoids the Central Point in the Indictment

Wayne B. Wheeler has made his answer to the Boston Evening American's revelations of the secret minutes of the Anti-Saloon League.

Mr. Wheeler says:

> "The Anti-Saloon League has never attempted in any secret way or any other way to dominate constitutional government in Washington or elsewhere."

Then what WAS Mr. Wheeler trying to do when he—as he boasts—forced the appointment of Roy A. Haynes as Prohibition Commissioner?

What WAS Wayne B. Wheeler doing but interfering with constitutional government when he—as he boasts—defeated four attempts of President Coolidge to remove Haynes for inefficiency?

What WAS Wayne B. Wheeler doing when he exhausted every influence he possessed in the effort to have his man, Haynes, reappointed in the face of his record for inefficiency?

Mr. Wheeler says that the Anti-Saloon League is in favor of pitiless publicity. His is not so pitiless as to come out frankly and stand behind the propaganda it puts out. Instead, Mr. Wheeler has his staff write magazine articles published under the names of prominent citizens. And, he says,

> "this process enabled us to quote the articles as we could not have done if another had not fathered them."

Wheeler publicity is "pitilessly" cheap and underhanded, exactly the methods which Mr. Wheeler used to belabor the liquor interests for employing.

In Mr. Wheeler's statement he minimizes the Dinwiddie incident, but does not even attempt to explain away a single one of the damning facts in the Anti-Saloon League's record of the Dinwiddie case.

It remains true, and uncontested, that Wayne B. Wheeler's predecessor in charge of the Anti-Saloon League in Washington, the Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, diverted $10,000 of Government funds to Anti-Saloon League purposes, paying part of the money to his own private secretary.

It remains true, and uncontested, that Dinwiddie admitted to the Anti-Saloon League's Executive Committee that he feared a Congressional investigation of what he had done, and that the Executive Committee censured Dinwiddie, restored the $10,000 to the Government and hushed up the scandal.

Mr. Wheeler has no comment to make regarding the revelation that the league carries numbers of Senators and Congressmen upon its payrolls, paying them as "lecturers," though they are later to vote on legislation in which the Anti-Saloon League is interested.

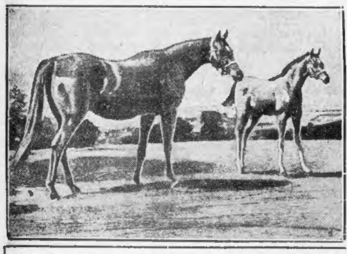
Mr. Wheeler conveniently passes over the annoying revelation that his superior, the Rev. Dr. Barton, wrote Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and instructed him to call on President Coolidge and threaten the President with the impending nomination of Al Smith.

It suits Mr. Wheeler to neglect to comment on that message of his to the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League, in which he communicated that a certain Federal judge in New Jersey has been appointed "by and with the consent of Wayne B. Wheeler."

We do not believe that the Protestant churches of the United States stand for the methods of the Anti-Saloon League as developed by Wayne B. Wheeler. We believe that the Anti-Saloon League and Mr. Wheeler are being advised of this fact in no uncertain terms and will hear more of it.

A Game Mother

Wealth Takes Good Care of THIS One



THIS IS DIADEM, GAME MARE AND FORTUNATE MOTHER.

The Hon. George Lambton, who trained this beautiful thoroughbred racing mare, calls her "the best mare I ever trained."

Lord D'Abernon, owner of the mare, called her "the gamest mare that ever raced in England." She was so game that His Lordship had not the heart to withdraw her from racing early, as is usually done with valuable brood mares. He kept her racing to an extent that, according to trainers, is apt to damage the "get" of the mare, using too much of her strength for racing, not leaving enough for her offspring.

This mare was entered in thirty-nine races, won twenty-four, including "The One Thousand Guineas," was second eight times, third three times, "unplaced" only four times.

Other mothers, compelled to work, will learn with interest that this equine mother of the race track was apparently NOT injured by her long racing career.

Her colts and fillies are winning races as she did. The handsome young colt beside her is named Diadochos, and had for father the great racing horse Son-in-Law.

Observe the marvelous care that is taken of THIS mother. Beautiful pastures are kept for her and her children as they come along, one each year. Carefully chosen food is given to her. She looks forward to a happy old age, free from all possibility of worry, and knows that a career is marked out for each of her children. She doesn't even have to worry about an incompetent father for those children. Care is taken to select the BEST fathers.

PLAYING HAND FULL OF SEVEN SPOTS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I AM an assiduous reader of the newspapers and fall for almost any kind of a feature that is popular. I am a good sample of the average man.

I work crossword puzzles until auks, enus and ras haunt me in my dreams, to say nothing of gnu and ai, the justly celebrated three-toed sloth, although I have my doubts whether any such animals ever existed outside a whiskey glass. Still, as getting drunk is not one of my indoor sports, perhaps my zoological acquaintance is limited. I have taken intelligence tests until I know where Kamchatka is and how to bound Beluchistan, but the last thing I tackled was bridge lessons.

My wife is very fond of bridge and every week or so the house is infested by a number of chattering females and filled with their bridge talk. It seems I ought to know the game.

Of course with a giant brain like mine that should be easy.

Women can play even with their brains. Think of my thundering intellect going down to the grave bridgeless, as it were.

So, in the language of the dentist, I decided to do some bridge work, and right here I wish to state that these dentist advertisements proclaiming painless denistry may or may not be true, but about painless bridge I have my own notions.

I got me some cards from a man in a store and bought me a newspaper out of my hard-earned salary and laid out the cards and took up lessons in Whist.

In the first place I never saw a hand like those hands in the lessons.

They tell you when you have the ace and five others to lead out the queen, provided the queen is guarded properly. I never had six cards of one suit and I don't remember ever seeing an ace and a queen consorting together in one hand. I don't think much of the queen's guards also. They look more like pages to me on account of their size. All my cards are fives and sevens with a sprinkling here and there of twos and nines. The blamed lessons never told you what to do with four spots and of these I have a varied collection always.

I have come to the conclusion that my high-brow critics are right and if I am no other kind of a moron at least I am a bridge moron.

What I need is not somebody to tell me whether to play the ace or the king first, but to tell me what to do with a hand full of seven spots.

And then I think that to be an expert bridge player, at least to be an A-1 bridge conversationalist, one should graduate from a medical school and be thoroughly up on post-mortems.

ST. BOTOLPH STREET and vicinity: NEWTON STREET and WARREN AVENUE. A district as full of shifting life as anywhere on earth. Here is where each three-story brick house looks exactly like every other house on the street. Each September a huge swarm of students descends upon the district and the rooms find new faces.

Artists-to-be, girls trying to learn movie acting, student physicians, nurses, attorneys, engineers, historians and future business men live in those quarters.

We go into one house and find a salesman, a waitress, a radio operator, a student and a run-away. They all live in the future. No matter how penniless now, they expect greatness some time.

The girls hoping to become movie actresses will get there last, if ever. Boston does no producing to speak of. The movie buildings down on Piedmont street look formidable to the neophyte, but inside they are as neutral appearing as a warehouse.

* * *

For two blocks between Broadway and Stuart street, Piedmont holds house after house of movie films, offices and movie salesmen. Drop into one at any time and a film (pronounced fillum when we were there) will be on the screen for the examination of prospective movie theatre managers.

* * *

It is the business of these concerns to sell movie films exactly in the same manner that canned soup, or ink, or carpets are sold. A few hundred to two thousand reels are always kept in the ventilated, fireproof vaults. When a salesman sells a feature to Dover, N. H., the feature is inspected and shipped.

* * *

However, to save motion picture producers wear and tear voluntary writers come forth even to the warehouses.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THERE'S many a truth which you may or may not learn in this brief life, but there's one fact from which you will not escape—

YOUR LIFE IS UP TO YOU.

No one else can live your life for you—

No one else can make you wise or happy or strong or tender or merry or mellow—

IT'S UP TO YOU.

"But that isn't true about everyone," you cry. "Some people don't have to struggle for success. Some people are born with fine homes and have everything done for them. They are surrounded by influential friends, put into good positions and inherit money. It isn't 'up to' such people. Their lives are made for them."

You're wrong, my friend.

Their lives aren't made for them. Their frames are made for them, but the actual quality of their lives they must make for themselves.

They may be given money—but no one on earth can give them that treasure within themselves which is the only true and lasting wealth.

No one can give them courage or shrewdness or patience or wit or steadfastness. They must build these things for themselves.

Wealth is an outside thing. Family is an outside thing. Amusement is an outside thing. Opportunity is an outside thing. In the last analysis you are alone inside yourself—and your immortal soul hasn't even a B. V. D. to cover its nakedness.

And the millionaire is just as alone and just as naked as you or I

When he comes to a crisis everything else will fail him but himself. Etchings, French cars and Chinese rugs won't help him—any more than radios or folding beds or beef stews will help you or me. Friends won't help him—even the most loving relatives won't help him, any more than they can help us. There is only one thing in all the world that he—or we—can depend on, and that is the strength within.

Now that seems a simple enough fact, doesn't it? And yet what a frightful time we have accepting it!

How we whine at Fate and blame humans. How we squeal and squirm and blame and excuse and alibi. How mad we get when Uncle Sam or papa or the boss or our sweetheart or wife or husband doesn't smooth out life for us.

What endless schemes we devise to Beat the Game—thinking always of some slick way by which we may evade Fate or graft ourselves into the good graces of Lady Luck!

How often and often we try to bully or bribe God.

And all in vain. For we can't pass the buck.

Life's a one-man game—

And it's up to us!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

There is nothing good or evil save in the will.—Epictetus.

Unbelief is blind. —Milton.

Truth, when not sought after, sometimes comes to light. —Menander.

All nature is but art. —Pope.

In wall and roof and pavement scattered are Full many a pearl, full many a costly stone. —Ariosto.

What is life when wanting love? —Burns.

We do that in our zeal our calmer moment would be afraid to answer. —Scott.

It is better to keep children to their duty by a sense of honor and by kindness than by fear. —Terence.

We should be as careful of our words as of our actions, and as far from speaking ill as from doing ill. —Cicero.

Men possessed with an idea cannot be reasoned with. —Froude.

What reason could not avoid has often been cured by delay. —Seneca.

The most wretched fortune is safe; for there is no fear of anything worse. —Ovid.
